State of the Judiciary Message

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY — 1990

When I attended my first judicial conference in 1956, Chief Justice Hudgins opened the meeting by saying: "The Supreme Court is current in its docket." He and Chief Justice Eggleston, who followed him, repeated this homily for several years, even after I came on the Court in 1961. But the practice soon stopped, and no one has been able to make that statement since. Until now. This morning, I can say to you: "The Supreme Court is current in its docket."

As I have reported in past years, court delay and calendar management continue to receive much attention. As documented in numerous surveys in Virginia and elsewhere, court delay is considered to be one of the most prevalent complaints citizens have about the court system. Determining methods to improve efficiency in case processing as well as increasing the convenience of courts to litigants are major objectives at every level of the court system.

Recognizing that leadership in this area should be by example, in October 1987, the Supreme Court of Virginia initiated a program designed to reduce the backlog in its docket. At the beginning of this program, we had 302 cases awaiting oral argument and 738 petitions for appeal pending. At the end of 1989, we had only 80 cases awaiting oral argument, or about the number we need to keep on the argument docket at all times in order to have enough cases briefed and ready for a session of court. Furthermore, we had only 250 petitions for appeal pending. In setting the tone for the future, we made the commitment to dispose of a case within 12 months of filing of the petition for appeal, a commitment we are now in a position to fulfill.

I am pleased to report that the Court of Appeals has also been pursuing an active delay reduction program. That court began participation in 1988 as a pilot in the ABA's Appellate Delay Reduction Program. A Time Standards Committee was formed to analyze case processing time. In April 1989, the committee recommended, and the Court adopted, a goal to conclude cases within 280 days of the filing of the Notice of Appeal. The court also has adopted a standard of 60 days maximum for assigning "mature" cases to panels for oral argument and for immediate assignment to a specially created panel when oral argument is waived. Furthermore, the court has implemented a standard of 60 days for preparation of unpublished opinions and 100 days for published opinions from the date of hearing.

In an effort to address the issue of delay in trial courts, in 1989 we sponsored, in conjunction with the Institute for Court Management, a calendar management workshop. Teams from nine Virginia localities participated in an effort to assess the nature and extent of delay within their courts and to develop a proposed plan of action to resolve identified problems. These efforts have been augmented by major court delay reduction programs in Fairfax County and Virginia Beach. Further, the Judicial Council has approved the recommendation, made by the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System, to adopt time standards for case processing. At its meeting at the end of June, Council will consider implementation of specific proposals as well as the adoption of several management reports which will facilitate the utilization of time standards. Hopefully all these efforts will allow Virginia to retain the ability to adjudicate disputes expeditiously.

I am proud of what we have accomplished in Virginia to reduce court delay. But I am also proud of the position of respect our judiciary occupies in general.

During the past year, I have had the opportunity to travel throughout the country and observe the courts in many states. From my observations, I have reached several conclusions. First, I am particularly impressed by the progress and quality of the state court system overall. While public opinion continues to reflect a lack of understanding of the courts, I believe that substantial improvements are being made each year. On the whole, the courts continue to perform well their mission in our system of government.

My second observation is that the Virginia court system is among the leaders in our country. Led by capable judges of the highest integrity and staffed by efficient, caring personnel, Virginia's courts are second to none in the quality of their service. Each of us should take great pride in being a part of a judiciary founded upon a rich heritage but dedicated to the ideals and visions necessary to move into the future.

The progress of the past decade, in Virginia and nationally, offers a momentum and excitement which should produce a sense of optimism. Although the courts have improved dramatically, more progress is needed. Two dark clouds, however, loom on the horizon.

First, the drug problem in this country has already reached epidemic proportions, and it will only get worse. This problem has the potential for ripping apart the fabric of our society. The impact on the family, the community, the budget, crime, law enforcement, and corrections will be astronomical. As leaders in the court system, we must also be concerned with the impact that this cancer will have on the courts' ability to function.

Needless to say, the flood of new cases has the potential for crippling the adjudicative process. This is compounded by the fact that presently the bulk of the federal money being used to attack the drug problem is being directed to law enforcement. While the need is great there, we must profit from past experience, which has shown that infusion of funds into one segment of the legal system without regard for the remainder leads to a failure to solve the overall problem. The legal system must be treated as a comprehensive unit and solutions to any problem—particularly the drug crisis—must embrace that perspective. If the courts are to play their proper role in the war against drug abuse, they must receive a proportionate share of the resources devoted to solving the drug problem.

A second dark cloud is the budget crisis faced by governments generally and Virginia specifically. As indicated by the tremendous growth in workload confronting the courts both now and in the future, this budget crisis could not come at a worse time. Not only are our efforts to modernize and advance jeopardized, but our simple ability to keep up is made problematical.

When we must hold positions vacant or not fill the small number of new positions authorized, it is destructive of the excellent system we have built and demoralizing to the dedicated people who serve that system. I am hopeful that the financial woes will be short-lived and that we can resume our aggressive program to continue the improvements necessary to make our courts a model for the nation.

As evidence of the progressive atmosphere which permeates our court system, I would like to recap some of our activities of the past year.

It was only a year ago that the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System delivered its report and set a new agenda for the future of Virginia's courts. During the past year, the trailblazing work of the Commission has precipitated much discussion throughout the state and, indeed, across the nation. The prime activity of the Judicial Council for the past 12 months has been the review and assimilation of this report. After lengthy study and debate, the Judicial Council has endorsed 118 of the 131 recommendations made by the Commission. The recommendations which have been approved will now be assigned priority and incorporated into our short-term plan. An Executive Summary of the Comprehensive Judicial Plan for 1990-92, entitled "Foresight 2000," will be published this summer. This document will provide a working agenda for those recommendations that Council believes can be accomplished within the next two years.

In an effort to improve the administration of justice in Virginia, the 1989 General Assembly, at the request of the Judicial Council, adopted legislation creating a Family Court Pilot Project. The purpose of this project is to determine whether consolidating the jurisdiction of family law matters into one court would prove preferable to the present division of jurisdiction between the circuit and juvenile and domestic relations district courts. At the request of the Judicial Council, I appointed an advisory committee to implement and evaluate the Family Court Pilot Project. This committee selected ten jurisdictions throughout the state to serve as Family Courts. Beginning on January 1, 1990, and continuing until December 31, 1991, some of the divorce, annulment, and affirmation of marriage cases filed in circuit court will be referred to these Family Courts. We hope that referral of these cases will serve (1) to have all cases relating to a family tried in the same court by a judge with family law expertise, (2) to make available to the parties the additional assistance of court service units and other agencies to more fully address family-related issues and concerns, (3) to have cases involving members of the same family tried in courts that are readily accessible to the parties, and (4) to provide courts in which family cases can be quickly tried and completed.

The implementation of this project has gone smoothly, and we have begun plans for a detailed evaluation of the program when concluded. For a thorough and objective evaluation, we will be drawing upon the resources of a public policy program being established at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

To promote public respect and trust, the Futures Commission suggested, and the Judicial Council agreed, that the court system should work to detect and eliminate disparate treatment in all aspects of court operations. As members of the Conference know, the judiciary has already taken an affirmative step in this direction with the adoption of voluntary sentencing guidelines aimed at eliminating unwarranted sentencing disparity. I can now report that, notwithstanding tight monetary constraints, the General Assembly has appropriated the funds necessary to implement this project on a statewide basis. The sentencing guidelines are expected to provide judges, in a succinct and accurate fashion, historical sentencing information on similarly situated offenders. Utilization of such information should ensure greater consistency, proportionality, and neutrality in criminal sentencing.

Since it is generally acknowledged that technology will be the driving force of the future, I want to comment briefly on our efforts at automation. To date, the Courts Automated Information System (CAIS) has been expanded to a total of 210 courts. This 20 percent expansion of the system over the previous year represents a total of 60 percent of all the courts in the state, with these courts handling over 75 percent of the state's entire judicial caseload. By any standard, this is one of the largest automated judicial systems in the country.

During 1989, the successful installation of an automated interface with the Department of Motor Vehicles took place. This achievement should improve efficiency in both the courts and DMV. Further, substantial progress has been made on an automated records indexing system for circuit courts. The pilot court should begin work on this system by the summer. Again, increased service and financial savings are anticipated from this project.

In addition, pursuant to a recommendation of the Futures Commission, a consultant has been employed to develop a long-term systems plan for automation in Virginia's courts. The work on the original systems plan, done in 1979, has been completed and the courts must now develop a blueprint for the next stage of automation. Unfortunately, this is another area where restricted funds can have disastrous consequences. In technology, if one stands still, one loses ground. As court users become more knowledgeable about automation, they demand more services. Automated services improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the courts as well as expand service to the public. It must be recognized that a dollar spent for technology multiplies many times in services provided. We must be able to obtain the resources to continue our leadership in this field.

What will the next year bring? As I have indicated, we will begin implementing those recommendations of the Futures Commission which have received the approval of the Judicial Council. Several specific efforts should be mentioned.

The report of the Futures Commission notes that the judiciary needs to understand the changing nature of society and to gather participants' views on ways to improve the operation of the courts in light of societal changes. The use of public opinion research to obtain direct feedback on the effectiveness and responsiveness of courts is virtually an untapped area within the judicial system. This fact seems remarkable, given the desire of court systems throughout the country to attack both the problems and the pattern of continuing erosion of public confidence. The report of the Futures Commission also stresses the need to examine court operations from the perspective of those who move through the system. In keeping with this philosophy, the Judicial Council has secured a grant to develop a consumer research and service development process within the court system. As the first project of its kind in the nation, this program will improve forecasting by establishing a research and survey capacity to determine key problem areas in court-community relations and needed changes in substantive law.

The project will create an ongoing mechanism for citizens to make known their views about the operation of the courts. Knowledge gained in this research may be translated into the judiciary's plans and into the development of services to help citizens make more effective use of the court system.

As a service-oriented sector of government, courts must be accountable to the public. This year, we will take a meaningful step in the area of increased accountability by participating as a pilot state in the national Trial Court Performance Standards Project. This three-year project has developed a set of standards as a means of self-evaluation and assessment. These standards are intended to assist individual trial courts in judging the quality of their results in such general areas as (1) access, (2) expedition and timeliness, (3) equality, fairness, and integrity, (4) independence and accountability, and (5) public trust and confidence. Fairfax County Circuit Court has agreed to serve as a pilot court for this project. It may be that other courts can be added during the year if grant funds become available. This project is another historical first for the courts of our nation, and Virginia is pleased to be joining in this effort of self-improvement aimed at assisting the courts to resolve disputes more justly.

As noted by the Futures Commission, courts in the Twenty-First Century will continue to have as their primary goal the just resolution of disputes. Attention in the future, however, will focus on how the courts address this goal and on the quality of the results. The report of the Futures Commission states that new emphasis must be placed on the methods of dispute resolution. Just as individuals are distinct and different, so too are disputes. To treat every dispute alike is not necessarily to treat every dispute fairly.

In an effort to provide viable alternative methods of dispute resolution, the Futures Commission recommended, and Judicial Council approved, the creation of a statewide office of dispute resolution services. Accordingly, we have submitted grant applications for funds to create such an office in the coming year. The role of this office will be multi-dimensional. It will perform basic functions such as identifying ADR resources throughout the state and licensing providers of dispute resolution services. It will also serve as a channel to help fund and encourage the creation of ADR programs by providing support to the judicial circuits and by improving the public understanding of ADR services. And, in its clearinghouse capacity, the office will enable localities to share information about their respective programs and to undertake experimental programs.

In summary, during the past year our court system has continued to make major improvements both administratively and substantively. Yet, as we look to the future, we must remember that the system will be measured by the quality of its performance. To pass muster, the demeanor of all court personnel must express the value and dignity of the individual, and not detachment or indifference. Judges and their staffs must create an environment of courtesy and respect, displaying at all times a dedicated responsiveness to the needs of the public. With these thoughts foremost in our minds, let us devote ourselves to fulfilling the ideals and the aspirations of those we serve. And with that commitment, let us be judged by the application of our judicial philosophy to the real circumstances of life

Judiciary's Year in Review

COMMISSION ON THE FUTURE OF VIRGINIA'S JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Immediately following the May 1989 publication of Courts in Transition, the report of the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System, work on its implementation began. A two-prong approach was adopted. First, the Commission's report was distributed widely within the state to citizen and bar groups, state and local government agencies, and judges and court personnel. In addition, the report was shared with state judiciaries throughout the country. An internal review of the report was initiated by the Judicial Council in order to develop a strategic plan for the judicial system for the 1990-92 biennium based on the ten visions and 131 recommendations. The following report details the activities initiated to ensure widespread dissemination of the report and describes both the process and results of the Judicial Council's review of the Commission's work.

Council members Judge Robert F. Stewart, Judge William Winston and William Broaddus listen to the discussion of the Futures Commission recommendations during Council's deliberations on the Commission's report.

I. Communication of the Results of the Commission's Work

In keeping with the project's futures orientation and in order to effectively communicate the Commission's work to as many persons as possible, the Office of the Executive Secretary in conjunction with the National Center for State Courts produced a 19-minute video highlighting the Commission's work. Copies of the videotape were sent to numerous groups including state and local bar associations, colleges, and civic groups in order to provide a visual presentation and synopsis of the Commission's work. The video was also distributed to several states currently involved in similar projects or exploring the initiation of such a project. Each law school within the state received a copy of the video for use in classroom instruction. The Virginia Community College System and the Department of Education were also sent copies for review and use by government and political science instructors in their classes.

Since issuance of the final report, more than 4,000 copies have been distributed to interested parties across the Commonwealth and to a significant number of persons from other states. In addition, an executive summary was produced which lists the visions and recommendations with an abbreviated rationale for each recommendation. An attempt was made to minimize the legal jargon wherever possible in order to make the document more useful to lay citizens.

In one of the most far reaching endeavors for insuring wide dissemination of the Commission's work, the Supreme Court joined with the Center for Public Service at the University of Virginia and the Virginia Cooperative Extension Service of Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University in sponsoring the Virginia Assembly on the Future of the Courts. This forum is modeled after the American Assembly which was established in 1950 by Dwight D. Eisenhower at Colombia University.

Justice Elizabeth Lacy responds to questions at the Virginia Assembly on the Future of the Courts.

The three-day Virginia Assembly brought together a cross section of nearly 100 leaders from throughout the Commonwealth. Using the findings and recommendations of the Commission's report as a starting point, the Assembly participants spent three days developing their own policy statement on what they perceived to be the most pressing issues for the future of Virginia's courts. After hearing discussions concerning the issues most likely to impact the courts in the next ten to twenty years, the participants were divided into small groups of seven to ten. Each group was asked to name the five most important issues facing the judicial system. After identifying the top issues, the groups then developed strategies for dealing with each of the issues. The Assembly staff then took the issues and strategies developed by each small group and synthesized them into an overall statement for the Assembly. Participants finally reviewed and edited the group report line by line during the closing plenary session and approved the final Assembly statement.

The policy statement was published in the University of Virginia News Letter which was sent to 6,000 recipients throughout the state. After taking into account many of the emerging trends which will have an impact upon the courts and their operation, the participants focused in on nine broad issues. These were public education and public confidence; mission, organization and administration; selection and quality of judicial personnel; equality of access and fair treatment; alternative dispute resolution; resources and funding; substance abuse; sentencing; and, preserving fundamental values and protecting judicial independence.

Citizens exchange views on the pressing issues which will face Virginia courts in the Twenty-First Century.

During the spring of 1990 a series of five regional Assemblies was held, thereby exposing additional citizens to the work of the Commission and familiarizing them with the crucial issues facing the state court system.

Throughout the year representatives from the Commission and the Office of the Executive Secretary have made presentations to numerous groups across the state and throughout the nation. The Commission's work was presented to the World Futures Society's Sixth General Assembly, the Boyd-Graves Conference, the 1990 Conference on the Future of the Courts, the Conference of State Court Administrators, and to local and state bar groups and civic organizations.

II. Internal Review and Approval of the Commission's Report

After receiving the Commission's report, the Council referred the document for review to its Judicial Administration Committee. Meeting several times during the summer and fall, the Committee reviewed each of the Commission's 131 recommendations. Following its review, a report was forwarded to the Judicial Council for formal approval. A total of 118 or 90 percent of the recommendations were adopted. These recommendations will form the basis of the judicial system's strategic plan for 1990-1992. The list below includes all Commission actions approved by Council.

1. Using Virginia Courthouse Facilities Guidelines as a basis, standards developed for courthouse facilities should be adopted, implemented and periodically updated.
2. All state courts should be evaluated to identify and to seek to eliminate barriers to effective access to services of the judicial system. (Using the standards adopted above.)
3. Court forms and procedures should be simplified and standardized.
4. Court forms should be uniform and computer generated.
5. Electronic filing should be instituted using software which leads the filer (citizen) through a series of questions generating a standard form of filing. Technology should be used to identify cases most appropriate for ADR.
6. Remote access to court records should be provided from appropriate locations.
7. To increase access to legal aid services, participation in IOLTA should be mandatory with the majority of this income going to support legal aid services. To supplement this, the General Assembly and Virginia Law Foundation should collaborate to provide additional funding for legal aid offices throughout the state.
8. The Virginia State Bar and private industry should jointly evaluate the need for prepaid legal services and develop a plan to meet any demonstrated need.
9. The private bar should continue to make its services available to the poor, pro bono, in civil matters. The State Bar should investigate ways of providing legal services to the poor which encourage participation and service by bar members.

10. Courts, with the assistance of the Generaly Assembly where necessary, should explore means of limiting the cost of litigation, including limiting unnecessary pre-trial discovery, the awarding of attorneys' fees and costs to the prevailing party and appropriate use of sanctions for frivolous pleadings.
11. Appropriately staffed and funded public defender offices should be established in every judicial circuit as the primary means of providing legal representation to indigent defendants in criminal cases. Statewide standards should be provided for all public defenders and court-appointed counsel by the Public Defender Commission. Standards should be established for court-appointed criminal defense requiring some minimum level of practice under the supervision of experienced attorneys.
12. Compensation for court-appointed counsel should be increased to increase the likelihood of experienced and capable criminal defense lawyers accepting assignments.
13. Time standards for processing of all cases should be adopted and monitored.
    a. Appellate
    b. Circuit
    c. District
14. Trial courts should adopt calendar management practices which stress the need to reduce waiting time and inconvenience for the public and the expedition of litigation.
15. The court management information system should be augmented to provide for the collection and anaylsis of data which can be used to identify the scope of the delay problem.
16. The Judicial Council should adopt trial court performance standards as a means of self-evaluation and assessment.
17. In order to deter repetition of criminal behavior and to merit the respect of society for disposition of criminal charges, the courts must have a variety of dispositional alternatives for defendants.
18. Courts should explain at the time of sentencing, the reasons for the sentence imposed.
19. The Executive Branch should develop ways to inform the public and offenders about the methods used to determine release dates from incarceration.
20. Sentence disparity should be minimized by the systematic analysis and dissemination to judges of historical sentencing data.
21. The jury system should be strengthened through statewide uniformity in the jury selection process in order to ensure randomness and full participation by eligible citizens.
22. The Standards Relating to Jury Use and Management in Virginia should be implemented and their implementation monitored by the State Court Administrator.
23. Creative methods should be developed for compensating jurors and reducing their inconvenience.
24. A juror orientation videotape should be produced.
25. A juror handbook should be developed which uses the question and answer format. A local supplement should also be included.
26. A rule should be adopted that allows juror notetaking.
27. A rule of court should be adopted to allow instruction of the jury at different points during the course of a trial.
28. All occupational exemptions from jury service should be abolished.
29. The length of jury service should be fixed to relieve the burden upon citizens.
30. Alternative dispute resolution methods should be developed:
    a. Within the court system, and
    b. By community-based providers outside the court system.
31. At the local level, each judicial circuit and district should have an array of alternative dispute resolution options available for use.
32. Virginia should create an Office of Alternative Dispute Resolution Services.
33. Virginia should commit public funds to develop alternative dispute resolution services outside the court system.
34. Virginia should experiment with dispute resolution services such as the multi-door courthouse program.
35. Dispute resolution mechanisms in addition to traditional adjudication should be available for civil and appropriate criminal cases.
36. While preserving litigants' right to trial, judges should have the authority to order mandatory participation in dispute resolution programs.

37. An extensive education program on alternative dispute resolution techniques should be undertaken.

38. Procedures, including using the Department of Motor Vehicles, should be provided for ensuring the most efficient method for processing uncontested traffic infractions.

39. Contested traffic infractions should continue to be heard through the adjudicative process within the courts.

Traffic case processing in the general district courts.

40. To promote judicial economy, the Chief Justice should have the authority to designate and temporarily assign any trial court judge to another court and all judges should have the power to sit, upon designation, at all other court levels.

41. The jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals should be expanded to include jurisdiction over all civil appeals with a commensurate number of judges and staff provided to handle the increased workload.

42. The Judicial Administration Committee recommends that the current petition system used by the Supreme Court be unchanged.

43. The appellate courts should have authority to summarily reverse cases which present clear error.

44. The appellate courts should have authority to dismiss frivolous appeals summarily without oral argument and to impose sanctions on parties and their attorneys who press frivolous appeals.

45. The largely fictional distinction between law and equity should be eliminated.

46. Consideration should be given to adopting a code of evidence.

47. Consideration should be given to clarifying the laws governing statutes of limitation.

48. Consideration should be given to providing simpler and/or alternative means of handling small claims.

49. In criminal cases, procedural efficiency could be increased without compromising defendants' rights by providing several mechanisms for initiating felony proceedings. The current system requiring a preliminary hearing and a grand jury indictment is duplicative and produces delay. The Committee recommends that, when a preliminary hearing is held, establishment of probable cause at that hearing is sufficient to initiate a trial in the circuit court without indictment by the grand jury.

50. The Chief Justice should have authority to approve the chief judge of each circuit or district selected by the judges of the circuit or district.

51. The chief judges of the trial courts should be selected to serve four-year terms and be eligible to serve no more than two consecutive terms.

52. The use of trial court judges to assist the Court of Appeals should be permitted.

53. Educational opportunities to develop increased proficiency in case, personnel and financial management should be available to chief judges.

54. The Constitutional office of Clerk of Court should be abolished.

55. Trial court administrators should be appointed to perform all court-related functions. This administrator should be appointed by the chief judge and serve at the chief judge's pleasure.

56. Tasks currently handled by the elected clerk of court which are not directly court-related should be transferred to an executive branch agency.

57. The state should assume full funding for the circuit court clerk's office.

58. The state should assume full funding for the necessary equipment for all courts.

59. The state should assume full funding for the law clerk and secretaries for all circuit court judges.

60. The state should assume full funding for the court-appointed counsel of defendants charged with violation of local ordinances and the costs of providing juries in civil cases and for misdemeanor cases where a local ordinance is violated.

61. A full-time Commonwealth's Attorney should be available to each judicial circuit and be provided with sufficient training, staff and technological assistance to function effectively and efficiently.

62. Guidelines should be developed in each circuit to cover the appointment and supervision of quasi-judicial officials, policies on orders of reference, fee schedules and control over the cost involved. Additional training should be provided to individuals appointed as special justices.

63. In order to implement the changes outlined in this report, the functions of the State Court Administrator's office should be expanded to provide additional administrative support to the Chief Justice, the Judicial Council and the local courts in meeting the public's changing needs for legal and judicial services. Full funding and staffing for these additional functions will be required.

64. The State Court Administrator's Office should develop and refine its management information systems.

65. Virginia should establish a selection process for judges which uses judicial nominations commissions.

Communications training is offered to the 1990 Pre-Bench Orientation Class.

66. Mandatory continuing education should be established for all judges.

67. A judicial evaluation program should be developed within the court system for the purpose of improving judicial performance.

68. An expanded range of magistrate services should be provided 24-hours a day. This may necessitate regionalizing certain low volume areas. Consideration should be given to training magistrates in mediation and arbitration methods and to utilizing the magistrates to provide alternative dispute resolution services for citizens.

69. All magistrates should be full-time employees with college degrees. Compensation for magistrates must be reviewed to be commensurate with any shift in responsibilities.

Magistrate certification training in progress.

70. Judges compensation must be adequate to encourage qualified individuals to choose a judicial career.
    a. Judges should have access to a law library and funding should be available for their secretaries and law clerks.
    b. Judges' staffs should have basic technology for information management and legal research.

71. The Canons of Judicial Conduct should be reviewed and revised as necessary.

72. The judicial system should ensure a compensation, reward and benefit system and a working environment that will attract highly qualified personnel to court service.

73. Lawyers should be trained before and after admission to the bar in the legal, practical and technological skills that will prepare them to serve the public in a diversity of roles in resolving disputes. The number of continuing education hours should be increased.

74. The Code of Professional Responsibility should be reviewed and revised as necessary.

75. A voluntary program of lawyer specialization and certification should be adopted.

76. Courts should be equipped with technologies comparable to and compatible with the technologies used in law offices and businesses.

   a. Courtrooms should be equipped with screens, monitors and projection equipment to display visual information.
   b. Provisions should be made to permit personal computers at counsel tables.
   c. Overhead cameras should be installed.

77. Courts should institute computer programs to schedule lawyers, judges and courtrooms.
   a. Computers should record activity on all cases.
   b. Computers should be used to schedule timetables for discovery, submitting instructions, pretrial motions, etc.
   c. Computers should be used for legal research.

78. State funding should be provided for purchasing hardware, software, computer and video equipment.

79. Public records in all courts should be automated.
   a. Information should be retrievable from off-site locations.
   b. There should be a careful study of information being kept as public record to minimize the amount of information kept.

80. Courts should expand their automated systems to permit the initiation of any case by electronic filing from remote locations.
   a. Filing fees could be collected electronically.
   b. Notices, summones and other documents could be generated automatically from the information that was indexed when the case was filed.

81. When it can be demonstrated that videotape recordings of courtroom proceedings provide a more economical, efficient and accurate record of a trial, then videotape recordings should become the official trial record. Judges should be able to obtain a transcript upon request. Courts should use computer-aided transcription for lengthy trials. Courts should monitor technology to insure that the most economical, efficient and accurate record of the trial is prepared.

82. When no testimony is offered, hearings may be conducted using interactive telecommunications.

83. When all parties agree to video testimony, the court should be able to accept closed circuit video or video-taped testimony.

84. Video technology could lead to the creation of satellite courts linked by video and by computer with the courthouse.

85. All court automated systems must possess security features to prevent tampering.

86. All court automated systems must include back-up capabilities to avoid system failure.

Computer training offered at the District Clerks Conference.

87. All courts should have cost-effective read-only access to the data bases of all other courts, either through direct telephone dial-up or through the mainframe computer in Richmond.

88. Courts and other justice agencies should be able to read each other's data bases containing public records and exchange information electronically.

89. District and circuit courts should have access to each other's data bases.

90. Trial courts, Court of Appeals and Supreme Court should be linked so that data can be electronically transferred among them.

91. When cost-effective all courts in Virginia should be linked through a computer-based electronic mail network.

92. All courts should have facsimile equipment for the transmission of documents and other information.

93. The courts and General Assembly should specify ways to authenticate electronic copies as true copies of an original.

94. The State Court Administrator should develop an integrated information system based on local or regional processing and storage of data, with the sharing of information through local and wide-area networks.

95. The judiciary should be aware of the public's needs for judicial services and the public's criticisms of the judicial process. Therefore, the court system should initiate an information system in order to develop and implement appropriate responses to the public's needs.

96. Judges and court personnel should have specialized training to increase their sensitivity to the needs of the public.

97. Local courts should intensify efforts to provide public information with a public information officer being created in larger courts.

98. The public should have the opportunity to file formal, written comments on court services and procedures through the use of an easy-to-complete form that is addressed to the State Court Administrator's Office.

99. The General Assembly has provided a mechanism for receiving and reviewing complaints against judges and a review mechanism should be provided for receiving and addressing allegations of discrimination against other court personnel.

100. Judges and court personnel should receive training to aid them in recognizing and eliminating both overt and subtle forms of discrimination. The Supreme Court of Virginia should work with the Virginia Commission on Women and Minorities in the Legal System to promote judicial education programs to address this issue.

101. Victim and witness programs should be encouraged in every jurisdiction.

102. Victim Impact Statements should be considered in every case (except where expressly prohibited under constitutional law in capital murder cases) in which the victim wishes to submit one and where the crime may have caused the victim physical, psychological or economic harm.

103. The public should be educated about the Crime Victim's Compensation Program.

104. Educational programs should be developed to inform the public about procedures for filing complaints which allege misconduct by attorneys, judges and other court personnel.

105. The State Board of Education should adopt and implement a curriculum to teach students at every level appropriate material regarding the Virginia judicial system.

106. The Supreme Court of Virginia should continue to encourage the development of court docent programs.

107. The entire legal community should work towards improving public education about the judicial system, including the area of alternative dispute resolution.

108. Court programs and videotapes of trials should be available for use by the educational community.

109. Computer-assisted instruction should be used to educate the public about the courts. This instructional software should be placed in schools, libraries and media centers.

110. The courts should prepare guidelines regulating access to video records.

111. A public information office should be created in the Office of the State Court Administrator.

112. The efforts of the Virginia State Bar's "Bar-News Media Relations" Special Committee should be strengthened.

113. The General Assembly of Virginia should create a public corporation known as the Virginia Law Institute to conduct an ongoing study of the substantive and procedural law of the Commonwealth as it relates to the courts, and to offer recommendations for changes and additions to the law.

114. A long-term futures planning capability should be incorporated into the judicial planning process.

115. The Judicial Council should create a process to review and advise the judicial system on the application of technology to the courts.

116. A joint committee composed of members of all three branches of government should be established as a forum for inter-branch discussions.

117. An orientation program on the judicial branch of government and the judicial process should be provided to new legislators and members of new administrations.

118. The judicial branch should formalize its procedure for informing the legislative branch of the impact of all proposed legislation affecting the court system.

Virginia's Family Court Pilot Project

Following several years of discussion and debate, the 1989 General Assembly adopted legislation to create a pilot project to determine whether consolidating the jurisdiction for family law matters into one court would prove preferable to the present division of jurisdiction between the circuit and juvenile and domestic relations district courts. The project will also develop data that will aid the legislature in deciding what changes, if any, are needed to improve the handling of family law matters. The family courts participating in the pilot project began receiving cases on January 1, 1990 and will continue in operation until December 31, 1991. Cases still pending at that time will remain in the family court until disposed.

The legislation required that the Judicial Council designate at least one juvenile and domestic relations district court from an urban district, at least one from a rural district, at least one circuit court judge from an urban circuit and one from a rural circuit to serve as family court judges. The Judicial Council was charged with evaluating the proceedings in the pilot family courts by comparing them to those proceedings regarding divorce, annulment and affirmation suits of a similar urban circuit court and a similar rural circuit court which did not participate in the program. Council will deliver its report, to the Governor and General Assembly, concerning the impact of the experimental family court program on the judicial system by December 31, 1992.

Clerks and court system personnel review the new Family Court Pilot Program procedures.

In the pilot areas, the legislation requires that a predetermined percentage of cases involving divorce, annulment and affirmation of marriage be referred to the family court for adjudication. All matters relating to these cases such as custody, support, visitation, child abuse, delinquency, etc. will also be handled by the family court. Parties in a case referred to the family court have 21 days to object to such referral and have the case returned to the circuit court. Decision of the family court regarding suits of divorce, annulment, affirmation of marriage, custody, visitation, termination of parental rights and support are appealable to the Court of Appeals. All other matters related to a referred divorce such as delinquency, children in need of services and spousal abuse are appealed to the circuit court.

In response to a request by the Judicial Council, Chief Justice Carrico appointed an advisory committee to implement and evaluate the Family Court Pilot Project. This committee is composed of judges, clerks, legislators and citizens. To assist in working out the details of the pilot project, a subcommittee was created to design forms and establish procedures to be used by the courts participating in the project. This subcommittee created forms and procedures for the selection of cases, orders of referral, file preparation, issuance of process, objections to referral, processing of cases, appeals and data collection. The advisory committee also created a Subcommittee on Evaluation to develop the criteria and information needed for evaluating the family court project. This subcommittee conducted a thorough examination of the issues that led to the creation of the family court including the "yo-yo" effect of hearings in multiple courts, the economic cost to litigants and court staff of multiple hearings and the lack of finality of decisions. In order to facilitate a thorough evaluation, the subcommittee identified the data needed to be collected by the pilot and control courts.

The Advisory Committee selected the circuit judges of Roanoke City, Roanoke County, Mecklenburg and Smyth and the Juvenile and Domestic Relations courts of Loudoun, Fairfax, Alexandria, Albemarle, Chesapeake and Lynchburg to serve as the pilot family courts. In those areas, the judges and clerks will determine the appropriate percentage of divorce cases (between 20 and 50 percent) that will be referred to the family court. In addition, the circuit courts of Arlington and Pulaski were selected to serve as "control" courts, i.e. courts with which the family court pilot courts will be compared.

In November, a conference was held to acquaint clerks, judges and attorneys with the procedures and forms to be used in the pilot areas. Participants from the pilot areas were briefed on the purpose of the substantive and procedural aspects. Judges received additional training in the handling of divorce, annulment and affirmation of marriage cases and reviewed the law and procedures associated with the handling of juvenile and domestic relations matters. Staff members from clerks' offices were given instructions in the use of the new procedures and forms.

Sentencing Guidelines

As a result of the successful pilot testing of the voluntary sentencing guidelines project in six judicial circuits, judges in each region of the judicial Conference of Virginia voted in the fall of 1989 to support expansion of the project to all 31 circuits in Virginia. Funding then was requested and obtained from the 1990 General Assembly to establish a felony sentencing guidelines system to encompass all judicial circuits. In conjunction with the expansion of this effort, the project will be moved from its previous location within the Executive Branch to the judiciary as of July 1, 1990. The Sentencing Guidelines Oversight Committee, appointed by Chief Justice Carrico, will continue to provide oversight and policy guidance to the project.

The sentencing guidelines are expected to provide to judges, in a succinct and accurate fashion, historical sentencing information on similarly situated offenders convicted of the same offenses. Therefore, it is believed, utilization of such information will ensure greater consistency, proportionality and neutrality in criminal sentencing within Virginia.

More specifically, the sentencing guidelines program is expected to perform the following tasks on a continual basis:

1. Implement the sentencing guidelines system in all 31 judicial circuits.
2. Monitor sentencing guidelines use and compliance.
3. Collect and analyze statewide sentencing data in order to detect shifts in judicial practice and to construct guidelines for some offenses currently not covered under the existing pilot system (the current system covers assault, burglary, drugs, larceny, fraud, homicide, sexual assault and robbery which are estimated to cover approximately 85 percent of all felony convictions.)
4. Revise the sentencing guidelines as requested by the Judicial Sentencing Guidelines Oversight Committee.
5. Process and automate information on all felony sentences imposed.
6. Provide ongoing training and technical assistance to an estimated 2,500 guidelines users (probation officers, Commonwealth's Attorneys, defense attorneys, clerks, and judges). The need for this assistance results from the periodic revisions of the guidelines as well as the turnover of field staff and the addition of new attorneys.
7. Conduct specialized guidelines training sessions for specific groups (e.g. judges).
8. Provide ad hoc policy analysis and research support for the judiciary, the legislature, Governor and other state and local agencies.
9. Respond to ad hoc data and information requests from individual localities and judges as well as other states and the federal government.
10. Provide the Governor, all judges, Commonwealth's Attorneys, public defenders, legislators and probation officers semi-annual summaries of sentencing practices.
11. Publish a quarterly newsletter which highlights guidelines revisions, research findings and related criminal justice information.
12. Publish the Judicial Sentencing Guidelines Oversight Committee's annual report detailing statewide sentencing practices and Committee activities.
13. Conduct recidivism research on Virginia offenders to identify for judges those offenders who pose minimal risk to public safety if placed into selected programs designed to divert offenders from jail and prison; and,
14. Promote the public's understanding of the sentencing process and the sentencing guidelines.

Cameras in Courts

The 1987 session of the General Assembly created an experimental two-year program allowing the use of cameras in courtrooms of selected localities in Virginia. With certain restrictions, the original legislation permitted the use of television cameras, still cameras and radio recording equipment in the courtrooms of the Supreme Court of Virginia, the Court of Appeals of Virginia, the circuit courts of Virginia Beach and Bedford and the general district courts of Caroline and Charlottesville. In 1989, the General Assembly extended the program for an additional year and increased the number of participating circuit courts from two to three with Henrico Circuit subsequently being selected as the third participant.

The Supreme Court of Virginia was given the responsibility of administering the program and conducting an evaluation of its impact on the courts. To accomplish this, evaluation forms were developed and distributed to participating courts at the initiation of the project. These forms were given to jurors, witnesses, attorneys, judges, clerks and court personnel who participated in cases in which cameras were present in the courtroom. The participants were asked to evaluate whether cameras in the courtroom caused any problems or affected the proceedings. They were also asked to characterize, as favorable or unfavorable, their experience with cameras in the courts and whether they favored or opposed the use of cameras in the courtroom.

In order to elicit the views and perceptions of the news media, the Supreme Court, in late 1989, sent out survey questionnaires to all television and radio stations across the state. These surveys were designed to find out the extent to which the news media used the opportunity to have cameras in courtrooms and how coverage was presented to the public. The television and radio stations and newspapers were also asked to evaluate the effect cameras in courts had on the participants and the proceedings. The media were asked their views concerning the primary benefit of allowing cameras in courts, whether public understanding of the courts had been enhanced by the cameras in courts program and whether they favored expansion of the program to all localities in Virginia.

After reviewing the responses to these surveys, soliciting information from all circuit court judges in Virginia and examining other relevant materials, the Supreme Court submitted a report, in early 1990, to the Governor and General Assembly. The Court was of the opinion that the public's right of free access to the courts was well serviced without electronic media, still photography or radio broadcasting of judicial proceedings and that the state of the law prior to 1987 preserved a proper balance between the free-press requirements of the Federal and Virginia Constitutions along with the traditions of fair, orderly and impartial trials.

The Court further concluded that the factors (such as the impact upon victims, witnesses, attorneys, etc.) associated with having cameras in the courtroom that may affect judicial proceedings in the circuit courts apply equally to the general district courts, except for those pertaining to jurors. By contrast, few of them applied to the appellate courts. The Court found media coverage in the Court of Appeals to be so rare during the experiment that its impact was inconsequential. On the other hand, the coverage in the Supreme Court proved to be more frequent, but was seen to have had little discernible impact on the proceedings. Therefore, the Supreme Court concluded that except in the case of the appellate courts, the overall impact of the experimental program upon the Commonwealth's judicial system had been negative.

The 1990 General Assembly adopted Senate Bill 281 which extends the experiment from the original three years to five years and requires the Supreme Court to submit an additional report on the program by December 31, 1991.

COURT DELAY REDUCTION EFFORTS

Circuit Courts

In recent years, the judiciary has undertaken steps to assess the extent as well as causes of delay in trial courts in Virginia. According to national standards, 90 percent of all civil cases should be concluded within 12 months of filing. In Virginia, only about 62.4 percent of all civil cases were concluded within that time frame in 1989. If cases purged under the two- and five-year rules are excluded, about 72.3 percent of all civil cases in the circuit courts are concluded within 12 months of filing. In 1989, none of the 31 circuits met the 90 percent standard.

In an effort to address the issue of delay in trial courts, the Supreme Court, in conjunction with the Institute for Court Management, held a three-day calendar management workshop in August 1989 for circuit courts. Teams from several localities (Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Richmond, Chesterfield, Alexandria, Winchester, Frederick, Rockingham/Harrisonburg, and Loudoun) attended the workshop. Teams were composed of judges, clerks, deputy clerks, practicing attorneys and Commonwealth's Attorneys from the localities. The participants heard from nationally recognized experts on such topics as the causes of delay, use of time standards in courts and methods for implementing change in the court environment. They also received information concerning successful calendar management programs in other states as well as in Virginia. The participants received advice on the use of management information to help them evaluate potential problems related to docket management. Each team assessed the nature and extent of delay within their courts and developed a proposed plan of action to discuss with other circuit judges, clerks and the local bar in order to improve case processing within their circuits. Follow-up technical assistance is being provided to the participating courts when requested.

The Virginia Beach Circuit Court team participating in the conference included judges, court and clerks office personnel and members of the local bar.

In late 1989, the Judicial Council approved the recommendation, made by the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System, to adopt time standards for the disposition of cases at the appellate, circuit and district levels. Additional management information reports currently are being developed to provide judges with improved data for assessing the extent of delay in the local courts.

Supreme Court of Virginia

In October 1987, the Supreme Court initiated, as an emergency measure, a program designed to reduce the current backlog in its docket. Each justice accepted a 25 percent increase in opinion writing assignments. Through this program, the Court sought to eliminate the backlog in the argument docket and the backlog in petitions pending before the Court.

At the beginning of this program, there were 302 cases waiting to be argued and 738 petitions for appeal pending. As of November 10, 1989, there were only 80 cases waiting to be heard by the Court, all of which were filed after January 1, 1989. Not since March 1973 have there been so few cases on the argument docket. In addition, only 250 petitions for appeal were pending before the Court as of November 6, 1989.

The Court adopted a goal for the disposition of cases to be implemented once the backlog was eliminated. This goal is to dispose of all cases within 12 months of the filing of the petition for appeal. The Court expects to achieve this goal in mid-1990 and plans to continue its accelerated schedule of case disposition at least until that time.

Court of Appeals of Virginia

In 1989, the Court of Appeals of Virginia began participation as a pilot court in the American Bar Association's Appellate Delay Reduction Program. A Time Standards Committee was formed to analyze case processing time in the Court of Appeals and to make recommendations to the full court concerning time guidelines and case processing procedures. This committee, composed of Court of Appeals judges, clerk's office staff, the chief staff attorney and staff from the state court administrator's office reviewed each step of the appellate process and identified areas where procedures could be streamlined and delay reduced.

The Committee examined actual case processing times in the Court of Appeals and compared them to the standards promulgated by the American Bar Association. The ABA Standards state that, in appellate courts, the time from filing of the Notice of Appeal to case disposition should not exceed 280 days. The Committee found that in 1987, the mean time from filing to disposition was 225 days for criminal petitions, 428 days for granted criminal cases, 239 days for all criminal cases (both petitions denied and appeals granted), 295 days for domestic relations appeals and 240 days for Industrial Commission appeals. Further the ABA Standards state that the transcript and record should be filed within 30 days of the filing of the Notice of Appeal. The Rules of Court now permit a transcript to be filed within 60 days after entry of judgment.

In April 1989, the Committee recommended, and the Court adopted, a goal to conclude cases within 280 days of the filing of the Notice of Appeal. As of September 1989, the court had adopted a standard of 60 days maximum for assigning "mature" cases to panels for oral argument and immediate assignment to a specially created standing panel when oral argument is waived. The court also had adopted a standard of 60 days for the preparation of unpublished opinions and a standard of 100 days on published opinions (from the date of hearing). A standard of seven days was adopted for processing by the clerk's office once the opinion was completed.

Several rule changes regarding the preparation of the record also were identified and recommended. The Court recommended that the authority to extend the time for filing of the transcript be vested in the Court of Appeals rather than with the trial court judge. The Judicial Council has approved a change to Rule 5A:8 that would implement this shift of authority. A change to another rule of court was suggested that would require counsel for the appellant to certify that appropriate arrangements had been made with a court reporter to ensure that the transcript is filed in a timely manner. Both this suggested rule change and a form Notice of Appeal designed to expedite case processing are being reviewed by the Judicial Council. Further, in order to ensure the time and accurate filing of the case record, the Clerk's office has created a check list for circuit court clerk's to be used in preparation of the record.

The Court, through its Time Standards Committee, will continue to review procedures and case disposition information in an effort to further identify areas where the time for case processing can be reduced and delay eliminated. In 1990, the Committee plans to examine additional methods for expediting the preparation of the record, develop procedures and techniques for dealing with any problems of backlog and review the petition process in order to eliminate any unnecessary processing time for granted appeals. The Committee will also continue to analyze and report on the amount of time actually taken to dispose of cases.

Indigent Defense

For the past decade, the issue of financing indigent defense services has been under study by the judiciary and the legislature. The Judicial Council has long supported increased fees for court-appointed counsel and expansion of the public defender offices where it can be cost-justified. In late 1989 the General Assembly's continuing Joint Subcommittee Studying Alternative Indigent Defense Systems (HJR 279) recommended that the 1990 legislature increase the maximum fees allowed to court-appointed counsel pursuant to §19.2-163 by 20 percent in Fiscal Year 1990-91. The net cost to the Commonwealth, assuming no changes in staffing and workload levels in the Public Defender Offices, was estimated at $3.4 million. The Committee felt the increase was needed in order to continue the progress made to date to ensure that counsel are fairly compensated, as measured by the national average of compensation, and will continue to be available for indigent defendants.

In addition, the joint subcommittee proposed that the fees allowed to court-appointed counsel for children in the juvenile and domestic relations district courts pursuant to §16.1-267 should not be linked to such fees paid in the general district courts but should reflect the unique focus of the juvenile courts on finding appropriate services and treatment for the child and the protracted nature of the proceedings which frequently involve detention, adjudication and disposition hearings.

Neither recommendation was approved. However, funding was appropriated to expand the public defender system by adding two offices in Fredericksburg and Halifax. Additional monies also were obtained to expand the Staunton office to include service to Buena Vista, Lexington and Rockbridge County. The map on the previous page graphically illustrates the location of the 40 jurisdictions encompassed by the public defender system.

During 1990, the joint subcommittee will be continued to (1) assess the feasibility of further increasing the maximum fees allowed to court-appointed Indigent Defense in 1988 in order to place Virginia close to the national average of fees paid; (2) evaluate the desirability of mandating creation of public defender offices in those areas where such a system would be more cost effective or otherwise modifying the means by which new public defender offices are created; and (3) assist the Bar Association in its efforts to secure creation of a Capital Resource Center in Virginia. On the latter, the joint subcommittee noted that creation of a centralized resource center for use by defense counsel on direct and collateral appeals in capital cases would improve the legal services provided in these complex cases but said that further study is needed to identify the amount of funding required and the availability of funds under the federal grant program and from the state and private sector sources.

Court Automation

The judicial system continued its effort to assist court personnel in the efficient management of court activities by expanding the use of automation within the courts during 1989.

The Courts Automated Information System (CAIS) was expanded to a total of 197 courts by the end of 1989, representing a 20 percent increase over the number of courts using the system at the end of 1988. The addition of 33 courts brought the system total to 81 circuit courts, 55 general district courts, 27 combined courts, and 34 juvenile and domestic relations courts, of which 131 have the Financial Management System (FMS) and 167 the Case Management System (CMS). A majority of the courts have both the Financial and the Case Management systems. While the total number of courts using the systems represents a total of 60 percent of all the courts in the state, these same courts handle over 75 percent of the entire state's judicial caseload.

A CMS/FMS interface developed for the general district courts provided the year's most valuable enhancement. This interface allows information to be entered into one system and in turn automatically updated in the other system. For example, a prepayment extended in the financial system will automatically update the case management system with fines, cost and date of payment. While in another instance, a finding of guilty entered into the case management system will automatically establish an accounts receivable item in the financial management system. This interface reduces the amount of data entry time for court personnel. A similar interface for the circuit courts is under development and scheduled for installation in a pilot court during 1990

The Supreme Court's Financial Management System received formal certification by the Auditor of Public Accounts in December 1989. While in November 1989, the FMS system was used to generate computer tapes for the Department of Taxation which provided information on over 60,000 delinquent accounts amounting to $11 million payable to the Commonwealth and local governments.

The successful installation of an interface between the Department of Motor Vehicles and a pilot general district court took place in July 1989. This interface supports the transference of information between the court's CMS and DMV. Data and records can be edited and after the expiration of the appeal period, the Abstract of Conviction can be sent from the court to DMV via computer tape. This interface reduces the amount of time court and DMV personnel must spend entering the information.

A number of changes to the interface system were precipitated by the recodification of certain sections of the traffic code following the 1989 General Assembly session. These changes were successfully implemented in the Richmond-Manchester General District Court which served as the pilot court for this project. The interface is scheduled to be expanded to ten more courts by mid-1990, after which four courts a month are expected to go on-line during the later part of 1990.

Progress was made on the automated records indexing system, a joint project between the Circuit Court Clerks' Association and the state court administrator's office. Final hardware and software vendor selections were made, equipment was purchased and training of MIS staff took place. The test system was demonstrated at the Circuit Court Clerks' Conference in early 1990. The pilot court, Madison County Circuit Court, received the system for testing in late Spring 1990.

The Supreme Court implemented its case tracking system SCOLAR in early 1989. This system is similar to the STARS system used by the Court of Appeals. These systems allow the courts and clerks' offices to follow-up electronically on cases.

Juror Orientation

In response to a recommendation made by the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System, the Supreme Court in conjunction with the National Center for State Courts produced a new jury orientation videotape. The video, which was narrated by Roger Mudd, was distributed to all circuit courts within the state. In addition copies were sent to all 12th grade government teachers, all central public libraries, all public television stations and all public access cable stations throughout Virginia.

As a second part to that recommendation, a new jury orientation handbook was published. This handbook follows a question and answer format to familiarize prospective jurors with their responsibilities. The combination of the new handbook and videotape has_greatly improved the courts' ability to orient jurors to the jury process thereby helping to relieve some of the anxiety prospective jurors may have about their roles.

Creation of New Judgeships

In response to increasing caseloads experienced in certain judicial circuits and districts, the 1990 General Assembly authorized funding for four new circuit court judgeships and eight general district court judgeships. The additional circuit court judgeships are in the First, Second, Fifteenth and Thirty-First Circuits. With the exception of the judgeship in the Second Circuit which will become effective February 1, 1991, the new judges will begin service on July 1, 1990. With these four judgeships, the total number of circuit court judgeships will rise to 131. The eight additional general district court judgeships were created in the First, Second, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, and Nineteenth Districts with two judgeships being added in the Fifteenth.

INDIGENT DEFENSE SERVICES

During FY 1989, the Commonwealth paid more than $17 million for the representation of indigent defendants, as required by law. Total costs increased 18 percent over FY 1988, a more modest rise than in the two previous fiscal years. Court-appointed attorneys' fees grew by 17 percent while the operating costs of the public defender system increased by 26 percent. This significant rise continues to be due to the expansion of the public defender system. Within the past year, new offices have been opened in Bedford City and County, Suffolk, the city of Franklin, and Isle of Wight County. The Danville public defender office was initiated in March 1990.

Three categories of fees doubled between FY 1988 and FY 1989. Guardian ad litem fees rose 111 percent, costing a total of $1.1 million in FY 1989. Interpreters fees rose 119 percent to a FY 1989 total of $314,581, and witness (out of state) mileage costs rose 161 percent with a FY 1989 total of $64,150.

The cost of providing court-appointed counsel to indigents increased 16 percent in FY 1989, and the number of charges represented increased 13 percent from FY 1988. Thus, the average fee paid to attorneys for representing indigents rose from $101 per charge in FY 1988 to $104 in FY 1989.

The Commonwealth recouped $1,884,896 in FY 1989 from indigents convicted of crimes, about 14 percent of the amount spent on court-appointed counsel fees.

INVOLUNTARY MENTAL COMMITMENT

The Commonwealth spent $7.1 million for involuntary mental commitment proceedings in FY 1989, an increase of almost 13 percent ($792,368) from the amount spent in FY 1988. This increase was due in large part to a jump of 14.3 percent ($578,241) in hospital costs. The expenses of special justices rose 12 percent while the cost of providing attorneys increased 8.2 percent. Fees paid to physicians and psychiatrists increased almost 9 percent. The costs associated with witnesses and interpreters showed an increase of less than 1 percent.

IMC costs in the general district courts increased almost 17 percent in FY 1989 and represented 87 percent of all IMC expenditures. In FY 1988, the general district courts accounted for 84 percent of all IMC expenditures. In the juvenile and domestic relations district courts, the cost of involuntary mental commitment proceedings declined almost 27 percent in FY 1989 while in combined courts the amount expended for such proceedings jumped by almost 18 percent.

The cost of detention (hospital costs, fees for physicians and psychiatrists) accounted for 73 percent of all IMC costs in FY 1989. Such costs represented 72 percent of all IMC costs in FY 1988. Detention costs rose from $4.5 million in FY 1988 to $5.1 million in FY 1989.

Commitment hearing costs, which represent about 13 percent of all IMC expenditures, increased 10.6 percent in FY 1989 while the costs of preliminary hearings (which account for 12 perent of all costs) rose by 9.4 percent. Recommitment hearings, although accounting for only 2 percent of all IMC expenditures, increased by 8.6 percent from $154,321 in FY 1988 to $167,604 in FY 1989.

VIRGINIA COURTS

Supreme Court of Virginia

The Supreme Court of Virginia is one of the oldest continuous judicial bodies in the United States. Its roots are deep in the English legal system dating to the early seventeenth century as part of the Charter of 1606 under which Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement in North America, was established.

The year 1989 was very eventful for the Court. On January 3, Elizabeth B. Lacy, the first woman justice ever to serve on the Court was sworn in. On October 4, 1989, Justice John Charles Thomas submitted his resignation. He was replaced by Justice Leroy Rountree Hassell who was sworn in on December 28, 1989.

The Court's original jurisdiction may be invoked by way of petition for mandamus, prohibition, or habeas corpus. Appellate jurisdiction is invoked by appeal or writ of error attacking the judgment of a trial court. The Court hears appeals from the circuit courts involving civil cases (excluding domestic relations cases), criminal cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed, habeas appeals, and appeals from the State Corporation Commission.

The Supreme Court is empowered to deal with matters concerning judicial censure, retirement and removal. Subject to some statutory limitations, cases decided by the Court of Appeals may be appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court may, on its own motion or that of the Court of Appeals, certify a case originally appealed to the Court of Appeals for review by the Supreme Court before it has been determined by the Court of Appeals.

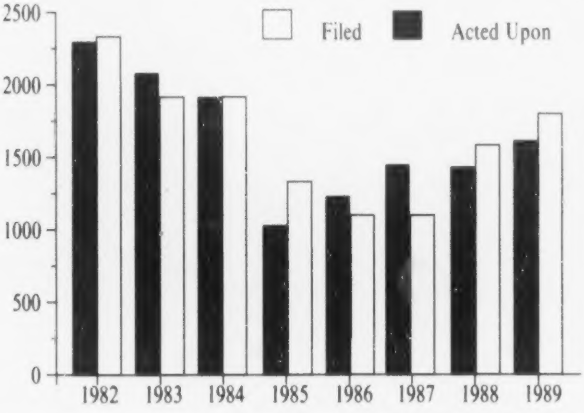
Petitions Filed and Acted Upon 1982-1989



The Court meets for five-day sessions beginning in October and continuing every seventh week thereafter until the completion of the June docket. The Court does not meet in July but holds a three-day session in late August or early September. All sessions are held in Richmond. During the six-week recess between each session, the Justices conduct extensive legal research upon the cases awaiting decision, draft and review opinions, study cases in which petitions for appeal have been filed, conduct hearings on petitions for appeal, and attend to administrative duties.

In addition to its appellate functions of examining results reached in lower courts and of redefining and developing the body of state law, the Supreme Court is also responsible for the general supervision of the entire Virginia Judicial System. The Supreme Court is authorized to make rules of practice and procedure and to oversee changes in the organization of the lower courts.

In addition to its appellate functions of examining results reached in lower courts and of redefining and developing the body of state law, the Supreme Court is also responsible for the general supervision of the entire Virginia Judicial System. The Supreme Court is authorized to make rules of practice and procedure and to oversee changes in the organization of the lower courts.

In 1989, the number of filings in the Supreme Court increased to 1,573, a 9.3 percent jump from 1,439 petitions filed the year before. Criminal appeals increased almost 13 percent from 371 in 1988 to 419 in 1989. Civil appeals also climbed from 574 in 1988 to 631 last year. The number of writs of mandamus dropped from 72 to 60, while the number of writs of prohibition stayed the same at 11 in both 1988 and 1989. There were 434 cases (382 criminal, 52 non-criminal) appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court in 1989, an increase of 63 cases from those appealed in 1988.

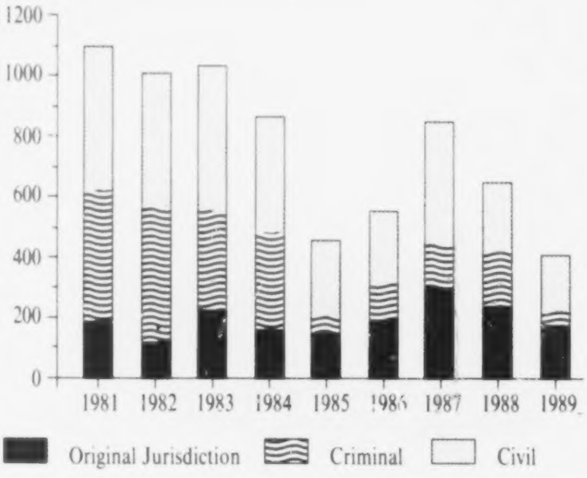
In 1989, not only were the total filings up, but the number of petitions and original jurisdiction cases acted upon increased 18 percent from 1,561 in 1988 to 1,842. The number of original jurisdiction cases acted upon jumped 19 percent from 465 in 1988 to 552 in 1989. In original jurisdiction cases, the number of petitions awarded jumped 52 percent while the number refused increased by almost 15 percent.

The number of cases waiting to be argued before the Supreme Court stood at 82 at the end of 1989. This was a drop of 69 or nearly 46 percent from the number waiting to be argued at the end of 1988.

The reduction in cases waiting is the result of the significant efforts undertaken by the Court beginning in 1987 to reduce the backlog in the argument docket and in petitions pending. At the beginning of the delay reduction program, there were 302 cases waiting to be argued and 738 petitions for appeal pending. At the end of 1989, there were only 82 cases waiting to be heard by the Court, all of which were filed after January 1, 1989. Not since March 1973 have there been so few cases on the argument docket. In addition, the number of petitions pending at year's end, 423, represented a 55 percent reduction of those pending at the close of 1988.

The court adopted a goal for the disposition of cases to be implemented once the backlog was eliminated. This goal is to dispose of all cases within 12 months of the filing of the petition for appeal. The Court expects to achieve this goal in mid-1990 and plans to continue its accelerated schedule of case disposition at least until that time.

Supreme Court of Virginia
Petitions at End of Year, 1981-1989



There were 215 cases decided by opinion in 1988 while another 65 cases were decided by orders. This was a 16 percent increase in the number of cases decided by opinion and a 39 percent drop in the number decided by orders. In 38 percent of the cases decided by opinion, judgment of the lower court was affirmed, whereas 42 percent of the cases had been affirmed in 1988. The number of opinions in which judgments were reversed or remanded in 1989 increased 25 percent over the 1988 figure.

COURT OF APPEALS

The Court of Appeals of Virginia completed its fifth full year of operation in 1989. The court, established in 1985, is composed of ten judges who sit in panels of three in various regional locations. The Chief Judge is elected by a majority of the Court's judges and serves a four-year term.

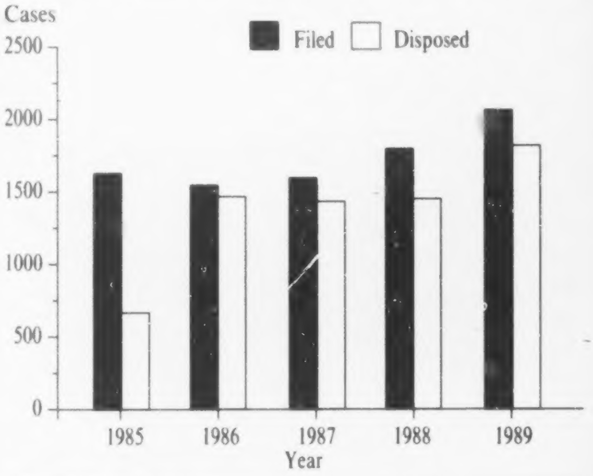
The Court of Appeals hears appeals from the circuit courts in all criminal matters, except death penalty cases, and in all domestic relations matters. In addition, appeals from the decisions of the Industrial Commission and from decisions of Circuit Courts involving most administrative agencies are taken to the Court of Appeals. Criminal appeals are heard upon the granting of a petition or writ of error while other appeals are heard as a matter of right.

In 1989, the Court of Appeals had 2,010 case filings, a 13.7 percent increase from the number filed in 1988. The number of criminal appeals rose 19.6 percent from 1,253 in 1988 to 1,498 in 1989. The number of domestic relations appeals declined slightly from 225 filed in 1988 to 209 filed in 1989. Industrial Commission appeals climbed by 8 percent over 1988 with 213 petitions filed. The number of Administrative Agency appeals and original jurisdiction petitions both dropped in 1989 (33 percent and 37 percent, respectively).

Not only did the number of filings increase for the Court of Appeals in 1989, the number of final dispositions also increased. The Court of Appeals disposed of 1,454 cases in 1988, but this number rose to 1,777 in 1989, a 22 percent increase. The Court of Appeals considered 246 more criminal petitions in 1989 than it did the previous year. The number of criminal petitions granted moved from 250 in 1988 to 288 in 1989. Even with this increase, the percent of petitions granted dropped slightly in 1989 (21.6 percent versus 22.5 percent in 1988).

Of the 706 appeals disposed of by the Court of Appeals in 1989, 120 (16.9 percent) were by published opinion, 211 (29.8 percent) were by unpublished opinion, and 375 (53.1 percent) were by order.

There were 434 cases appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court of Virginia in 1989. This represents a 16.9 percent increase from the 371 appealed in 1988. The number of criminal cases appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court increased 14.1 percent from 339 cases to 387 cases. The number of non-criminal cases also jumped from 32 to 47 which accounted for a 46.8 percent increase.



Court of Appeals: Cases Filed and Disposed, 1985-1989

Beginning in 1988, the Court of Appeals began participation as a pilot court in the American Bar Association's Appellate Delay Information Program. A Time Standards Committee was formed to analyze case processing time in the Court of Appeals and to make recommendations to the full court concerning time guidelines and case processing procedures.

Based on the committee's recommendation, the Court of Appeals adopted in April 1989 a goal to conclude cases within 280 days of the filing of a notice of appeal. In September 1989, the Court adopted a standard of 60 days maximum for assigning "mature" cases to panels for oral argument and immediate assignment to a specially created standing panel when oral argument is waived. The Court also has adopted a standard of 60 days for the preparation of unpublished opinions and a standard of 100 days for the preparation of published opinions (from the date of hearing).

CIRCUIT COURTS

Circuit Courts are Virginia's trial courts of general jurisdiction and have the authority to try a full range of civil and criminal cases. The circuit court system consists of 31 judicial circuits encompassing 122 separate circuit courts in the various counties and cities of the state. In 1989, there were 127 judges and 122 locally elected clerks serving the court.

In civil cases, the circuit court has concurrent jurisdiction with the general district court over claims from $1,000 to $7,000 and exclusive original jurisdiction over all equity matters including divorce cases, disputes concerning wills and estates, and controversies involving property.

In criminal cases, the circuit court has jurisdiction over the trial of all felonies (offenses that may be punished by confinement in the State Prison) and of those misdemeanors (offenses carrying a penalty of not more than twelve months in jail) originating from grand jury indictments. The circuit court also has jurisdiction over juveniles aged fifteen and older who are charged with felonies and whose cases have been certified by the judge of a juvenile and domestic relations district court for trial in circuit court.

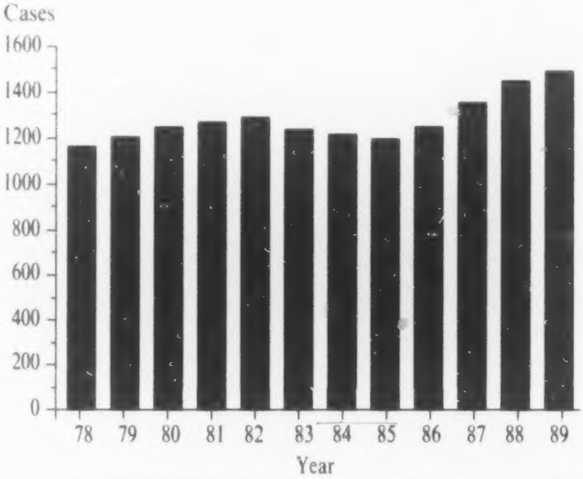
The circuit court has appellate jurisdiction over all appeals from general district court in civil and criminal cases and from juvenile and domestic relations district court in matters originating in that court. Appeals are heard de novo, that is, cases from these district courts are tried from the beginning as though there had been no prior trial. The circuit courts also hear appeals from administrative agencies.

Judges of the circuit courts are elected for an eight-year term by a majority vote of both houses of the General Assembly. Interim appointments are made by the Governor. There are at least two judges serving each circuit and as many as 13 serving the larger circuits. The chief judge of the circuit is elected by vote of the judges serving the circuit. Judges are required to reside in the circuit they serve and must have been admitted to the Virginia Bar at least five years prior to their appointment to the bench.

The clerk of the circuit court is a constitutional officer and is elected to an eight-year term by the voters of the locality. The clerk handles the administrative functions of the court and also has authority to probate wills, grant administration of estates, and appoint guardians. The clerk is the custodian of the court records and the clerk's office where deeds are recorded and marriage licenses issued.

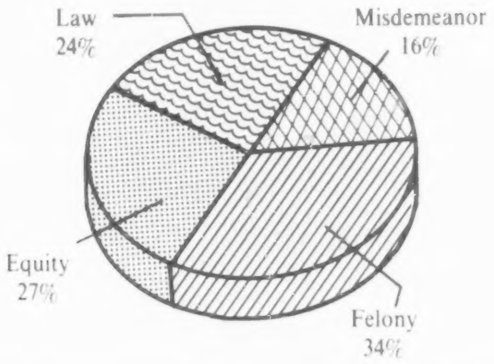
In 1989, 189,120 cases were commenced in the circuit courts of Virginia, an increase of 7 percent from the previous year. Criminal cases commenced rose 15 percent from 82,000 in 1988 to 93,991 in 1989. There were 95,129 civil cases commenced in 1989, an increase of 645 new cases from 1988, or 1 percent. As has been true for several years, the Nineteenth Circuit reported the highest number of commenced cases (19,232) of any circuit while the Sixth Circuit reported the fewest (1,877). The Nineteenth Circuit also accounted for 10 percent of the entire circuit caseload in the state. The circuit courts in Virginia Beach (2nd Circuit), Norfolk (4th Circuit), Richmond (13th Circuit), and Fairfax (19th Circuit) accounted for 31 percent of all commenced cases in 1989. The commenced caseload per judge during the year totaled 1,489 cases, an average of 749 cases commenced per judge emanated from the civil side and 740 cases commenced per judge from the criminal side. The Twenty-second Circuit recorded the highest number of total cases per judge, with 1,803 civil and criminal cases reported. In 1989, there were five additional judgeships authorized to serve the circuit courts and in 1990, the General Assembly created four more judgeships to assist with caseload increases.

Circuit Courts: Commenced Cases Per Judge, 1978-1989



Also last year, there were 178,473 cases concluded in the circuit courts. This represented an increase of 5 percent over the previous year. However, this was 10,647 fewer cases than were commenced during the year. The average number of cases disposed per judge was 1,405, 13 more cases than the previous year. An average 712 civil cases were concluded per judge and 694 criminal cases per judge were cleared from the dockets in 1989.

Circuit Courts: Caseload Distribution, 1989



Commenced cases continue to outpace cases concluded, explaining why the number of cases pending in the circuit courts have risen from 169,925 at the end of 1988 to 181,429 by year end 1989. This represented an increase of 36 cases pending per judge. Therefore, by the year's end, there was an average of 1,429 cases pending per circuit court judge.

The number of juries impaneled statewide rose from 4,312 in 1988 to 4,355 in 1989, a 1 percent increase. This represents 34 juries impaneled per circuit court judge. The number of jury days recorded statewide increased by 7 percent, from 5,304 in 1988 to 5,699 in 1989. Statewide, the number of jury days averaged 45 days per judge.

Civil

In 1989, 95,129 new civil cases were filed in the circuit courts in Virginia. This represented an increase of only 645 more cases than were filed in 1988. The circuit court judges averaged 749 civil cases each in 1989, which represents a decrease from the 774 they averaged in 1988. In the urban circuits, the average was 796 cases per judge while the judges in the rural circuits averaged 672 cases each. The new civil caseload increased in all but eight of the 31 circuits during 1989.

There were 40,399 law cases, 30,984 divorce cases, 16,421 equity cases, 4,239 appeals from the general district courts, and 3,086 appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The addition of five judgeships in the circuit courts coupled with a decrease of 2 percent in divorce cases and three percent in "other equity" caused the commenced cases per judge to fall by 3 percent.

The Nineteenth Circuit reported 12,390 civil cases in 1989, the highest number among all circuits and 13 percent of the civil cases reported statewide. The Twelfth Circuit had the highest average civil caseload per judge, 1,024 cases, while the Third Circuit averaged the fewest civil cases per judge, 495 cases. The Fourth had the highest total criminal cases with 7,237 cases while the Fifth had the highest average caseload per judge with 1,114 cases.

There were 90,376 civil cases concluded in the circuit courts during 1989, 272 fewer cases than were concluded in 1988. The number of civil cases disposed by judge trials fell from 11,461 cases in 1988 to just 10,016 cases in 1989. This was accompanied by an 805 case increase in the number of cases concluded by settlement, non suit, or voluntary dismissal. The number of cases concluded by jury trials was 1,418, 171 fewer cases from the previous year. Therefore, less than 12 percent of cases concluded in the circuit courts were disposed by a judge or jury trial (11.1 percent by judge trials and 1.6 percent by jury trial). Approximately 31 percent ended through settlement or dismissal of the case and another 16.4 percent were concluded by a decree on deposition. Another 13 percent were concluded through the commissioner's report and 5.3 percent and 9.3 percent of cases, respectively, were purged under the two-year and five-year rules. The circuit court judges concluded an average of 712 civil cases each in 1989.

Circuit Courts: Civil Caseload Distribution, Cases Commenced

About 63 percent of the civil cases concluded in 1989 ended within 12 months of filing. This was up by less than 1 percent from the previous year within the same time frame. The Twenty-second Circuit concluded the largest percentage of civil cases within 12 months (84.3 percent). This circuit comes closest to meeting the time standards set by the American Bar Association requiring disposition of 90 percent of cases filed within one year. The Fifteenth Circuit concluded approximately 80 percent of its civil cases within that time frame. The Third Circuit had the lowest number of civil cases concluded within the 12-month time frame with 23.4 percent. The percentage of civil cases concluded within 24 months of filing increased slightly from 76.9 percent in 1988 to 77.6 percent in 1989. Cases purged under the two-year rule and five-year rule represented 8.5 percent and 5.3 percent, respectively, of the cases cleared from dockets.

Criminal

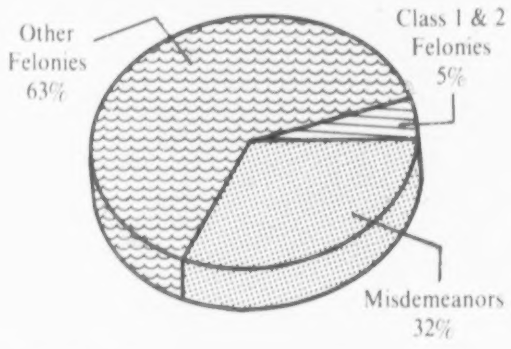
The total number of criminal cases initiated in the circuit courts during 1989 was 93,991. This represents a 14 percent jump over the previous year total of 82,623 cases. This significant rise in overall cases is due primarily to the dramatic 21 percent increase in cases categorized as "other felonies," i.e. all felonies other than those demand Class 1 or Class 2 offenses. Although specific types of cases are not tracked through the monthly caseload reporting system, the growth of these cases is considered primarily to be the result of increasing drug prosecutions. The number of misdemeanor cases rose 5 percent or 1,433 cases. Class 1 and 2 felonies actually decreased from 5,083 cases in 1988 to 4,750 cases in 1989, a 7 percent reduction. Eighteen of the 31 circuit courts showed some decrease in cases while in the remaining circuit courts criminal caseloads grew. The 127 judges averaged 740 criminal cases commenced in 1989, up from 677 cases in 1988. The judges in urban circuits averaged 736 cases each while those in rural circuits averaged 784 cases per judge. The Fourth Circuit again reported having the largest number of criminal cases of any circuit, 7,237 cases. The Nineteenth Circuit court was second with 6,842 cases commenced while 6,193 criminal cases were initiated by the Thirteenth Circuit. The Fifth Circuit had the highest average number of criminal cases per judge of any of the 31 circuit courts with 1,114 cases per judge. The Twenty-eighth with the lowest number of criminal cases per judge at 467 cases.

The number of criminal cases concluded increased from 82,623 cases in 1988 to 88,097 cases in 1989, a 7 percent gain. Misdemeanor cases concluded rose 4 percent while "other felonies" increased by 17 percent. Class 1 and 2 felonies increased slightly by 4 percent. The statewide average stood at 694 criminal cases concluded per judge, up from 647 cases in 1988.

Almost half of the criminal cases disposed ended in a guilty plea before trial while another 15.3 percent were nolle prossed or dismissed. Thus, 61 percent of the commenced cases did not reach trial. Eighteen percent of the remaining cases were concluded by a judge trial while 2 percent ended following a jury trial.

More than half (55 percent) of the criminal cases concluded ended within 150 days of initiation. Only 22 percent reached conclusion within 30 days of initiation. Another 14 percent of criminal cases ended within nine months and 9.2 percent of criminal cases remained open nine months after filing.

Circuit Court: Criminal Caseload Distribution, Cases Commenced



The vast majority of criminal cases (82,800) initiated each year are commenced by indictment, presentation, information, waiver, warrant, or appeal from the district courts. The number of defendants represented by these charges totaled 51,033, for an average of 1.62 charges per defendant. In felony cases, the average was 1.72 charges per defendant while in misdemeanor cases, each defendant averaged 2.39 charges.

Jury Trials

The number of juries impaneled increased 1 percent in 1989, from 4,312 in 1988 to 4,355 in 1989. That number decreased in law cases from 1,731 in 1988 to 1,692 in 1989. The number of juries impaneled in equity cases was reduced almost by half from 42 in 1988 to 28 in 1989. Felony juries impaneled rose from 2,045 in 1988 to 2,199 in 1989 while the number of misdemeanor juries declined from 494 in 1988 to 436 in 1989.

The judges in the circuit courts averaged 34 juries impaneled each in 1989, just about the same as 1986 and 1987. The Thirteenth Circuit reported the most juries per judge, 67 juries, while the Twenty-eighth Circuit averaged 64 juries per judge. The Twenty-eighth Circuit had the highest number of civil juries per judge, which was 32, while the judges in the Thirteenth Circuit averaged the most criminal juries, 42.

DISTRICT COURTS

More than three million cases were filed in Virginia's district courts in 1989. This means that approximately 12,734 cases were filed per day and 63,670 actions were initiated on a weekly basis. Ninety-one percent were brought in the state's 77 general district courts. This system also includes 69 juvenile and domestic relations district courts and 57 combined district courts. A single clerk's office serves the combined courts by handling the clerical functions of both a general district court and a juvenile and domestic relations district court. As of the end of 1989, the district courts were served by 184 judges and about 1,025 staff in the clerk's offices.

A variety of criminal, traffic, and civil cases are heard by the general district courts. In criminal matters, the general district courts hear misdemeanor cases and hold preliminary hearings for felony cases. In civil cases, the general district court has exclusive jurisdiction in suits involving amounts of $1,000 or less and concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts in suits involving amounts of up to $7,000.

The juvenile and domestic relations district courts have jurisdiction over all proceedings involving minors such as delinquency, juvenile traffic violations, children in need of services, and children who have been abused and neglected. These courts also hear cases involving adults accused of child abuse; offenses against members of their own family; support, visitation, and custody disputes; abandonment of children, foster care and entrustment agreements, court-ordered rehabilitation services, and court consent for certain medical treatment.

General District Court

There were 2,878,608 new cases filed in the general district courts in 1989 representing a 4 percent increase over the 2,772,276 cases initiated in 1988. The 1989 caseload composition was 52 percent traffic, 32 percent civil and 16 percent criminal. There were 3,022,526 hearings held in the general district courts in 1989, 7 percent more

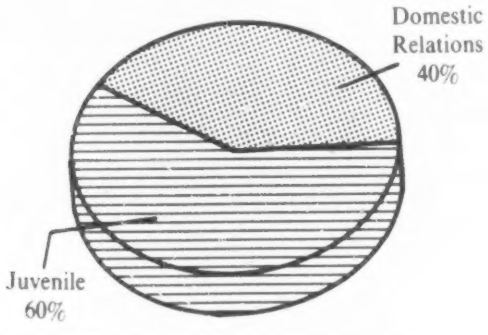
Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

The juvenile and domestic relations district courts reported a 4 percent rise in new cases in 1989 and are closely approaching 300,000 new case filings per year. The number of hearings held increased from 510,492 in 1988 to 563,337 in 1989. The juvenile and domestic relations district courts were able to conclude 97 percent of the cases on their dockets.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts: Caseload Distribution, New Cases



As in the previous years, juvenile cases comprised the majority of the J&DR cases, accounting for 60 percent of the caseload. This was 3 percent less than the previous year. A 17.3 percent increase in domestic relations cases was responsible for most of the increase in J&DR cases, juvenile cases rose only 10.5 percent or 16,340 cases.

For three consecutive years, the Nineteenth District reported the highest number of juvenile and domestic relations cases with 22,610 cases while the Second District held the highest number of hearings with 39,754 cases. Twenty-two of the 32 districts reported caseload increases ranging from 1.9 percent in the Twenty-eighth District to 20.2 percent in the Sixteenth District. The largest percentage decline came from the Fourteenth District where the caseload dropped 8.7 percent.

In 1989, on the average J&DR judges had 105 more new cases filed than in 1988, growing from 3,939 cases in 1988 to 4,044 cases in 1989. In the urban districts, the average per judge caseload decreased from 4,446 cases in 1988 to 4,314 cases in 1989, a 3 percent reduction. The average per judge caseload in the rural districts increased from 3,476 cases in 1988 to 3,782 cases in 1989, a 9 percent gain.

The number of new juvenile cases dropped 0.3 percent, from 178,892 cases in 1988 to 178,388 cases in 1989. Juvenile traffic cases dropped by 10.7 percent or 6,798 cases while custody/visitation cases rose 11.1 percent or 6,353 cases and deliquency cases only increased by 17 new cases. Status offenses decline 1.1 percent or less than 76 cases.

* Implementation of the Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System

 Revision of Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System

In 1989, the number of custody/visitation cases accounted for more than any other juvenile caseload category. The percentage of custody/visitation cases increased from 32 percent in 1988 to 36 percent in 1989. Juvenile traffic cases accounted for 32 percent of the total juvenile caseload while delinquency cases made up 29 percent. Status offenses made up only 4 percent of the total.

And in 1988, the Nineteenth District reported the highest number of new juvenile cases with 22,610 cases and accounted for 8 percent of all the juvenile cases in the state. The Second District had the second highest number of juvenile cases with 22,014 cases. The Nineteenth District and the Second District taken together represented 15 percent of the state's juvenile caseload.

The judges from the juvenile and domestic relations district courts averaged 2,435 juvenile cases in 1989, down from the previous year's average of 2,442 cases. Judges in the urban districts averaged 2,731 juvenile cases each while rural districts averaged 2,149 cases per judge.

The number of new domestic relations cases increased about 11 percent, from 106,403 cases in 1988 to 117,862 cases in 1989. This is primarily due to a jump of 14.9 percent in civil support cases or 7,320 cases. Capias/show cause actions increased by 2,771 cases or a 12.5 percent increment while the number of felonies rose by 262 cases. The new criminal support dropped substantially by 28.8 percent or 460 cases while misdemeanor cases increased 5.6 percent or 1,566 cases. The number of domestic relations hearings jumped 15 percent.

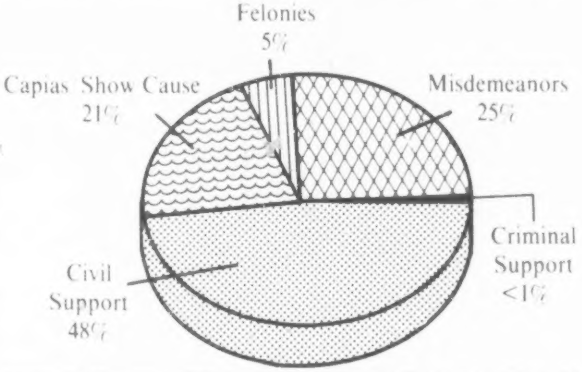
Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts: Domestic Relations Caseload Distribution, New Cases



In 1989, civil support cases accounted for about 48 percent of the domestic relations caseload while misdemeanor cases represented another 25 percent. Capias/show cause actions accounted for one-fifth of the caseload while felonies accounted for 5 percent and criminal support only 1 percent.

The Second District reported the largest number of domestic relations cases with 7,597 cases in 1989. The district also reported more hearings held in domestic relations cases than any other district with 13,421 cases. However, District 2-A again displayed the highest average domestic relations caseload per judge with 4,216 cases and 6,812 cases of hearings held per judge. This was more than twice as many cases as the statewide average of 1,609 cases. Judges in the urban districts each averaged 1,583 new domestic relations cases while judges in the rural districts averaged 1,633 cases.

MAGISTRATE SYSTEM

More than 1.1 million requests for assistance and processes were handled by Virginia's 32 chief magistrates and 445 magistrates during during 1989. This represents an increase of 65,695 requests (6 percent rise) over the previous year. In response, magistrates issued 905,301 processes, or 76 percent of those requested.

In Virginia, magistrates provide an independent, unbiased review of complaints brought to their offices both by law enforcement and citizens. One of the primary duties of magistrates is conducting bond hearings to set bail in instances in which an individual is charged with a criminal offense. Magistrates also issue various types of processes such as arrest warrants, summonses, search warrants, subpoenas, and civil warrants. A magistrate may also accept prepayments for traffic infractions and minor misdemeanors.

Magistrates are appointed by the chief circuit court judge for a term of four years. Within the first six months of the term of their appointment, magistrates are trained and must undgergo a certification process administered locally and through the Supreme Court. Each judicial district has one chief magistrate and a varying number of authorized magistrates. In some localities, full-time magistrates work on a shift basis to maintain an office 24 hours a day, while in others magistrates work on an "on call" basis, providing services as needed.

Magistrates reported 1,183,568 duty hours in 1989, providing services to the public during 611,794 of these hours. This was a decrease in the number of duty hours but a slight increase in the number of activity hours logged.

The number of probable cause processes issued (arrest warrants, summonses, etc.) increased from 462,891 in 1988 to 489,189 in 1989, about 6 percent. Processes were issued in about 86.9 percent of the cases. The number of bonds issued increased from 264,085 in 1988 to 287,428 in 1989. For every 100 bond requests, 60.8 were actually issued.

Again in 1989, the Nineteenth District reported to have the most transactions (106,319) as well as the highest number of processes issued (76,499). The Twenty-second District reported the most civil warrants issued (8,709). The Ninth, Tenth, Twenty-first and Twenty-second districts accounted for 88 percent of all civil warrants issued by magistrates in the state.

Statewide, magistrates issued processes at the rate of 1.48 processes for every activity hour. The Fourteenth District issued the largest number of processes per hour (3.23) while the Twenty-fifth District issued the fewest with 0.90 processes per hour. Statewide, an average of 2,034 processes were issued for every authorized magistrate position in 1989.

MEDICAL MALPRACTICE REVIEW PANELS

A system of Medical Malpractice Review Panels was instituted in late 1976. Since this time, almost 1,800 panels have been requested. During the calendar year 1989, 224 panels were assigned, an increase of 46 (25.9%) over the previous year. Since the inception of the Medical Review System, an average of 137 panels per year has been processed.

From the first panel assignment on December 6, 1976 through December 31, 1989, 1,785 panels have been requested through the Supreme Court. Of this total, 765 have been concluded, 134 dismissed, 630 withdrawn and 256 remain in a pending or to-be-heard status as of the end of 1989.

The 1977 General Assembly amended the original legislation setting up the Medical Malpractice Review Panel System and provided the following opinions which a panel might determine pursuant to Section 8.01-581.7 of the Code of Virginia.

1. Evidence does not support a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care;
2. Evidence supports a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care and that such failure is a proximate cause in the alleged damages;
3. Evidence supports a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care and that such failure is not a proximate cause in the alleged damages; or
4. Evidence indicates that there is a material issue of fact, not requiring an expert opinion, bearing on liability for consideration by a court or jury (i.e., the case contains a material issue of fact that a court or jury can resolve without an expert opinion).

Of the 911 decisions* which had been rendered as of December 31, 1989, 682 (74%) favored the health care provider, 134 (15%) favored the claimant, and the remaining 95 (11%) fell within the last two opinion categories of Section 8.01-581.7.

During 1989, Northern Virginia continued to lead as the section of the state where the greatest number of medical malpractice claims were filed. Northern Virginia was followed by the Tidewater area and the Richmond area. As illustrated on the following page, Hospitals, OB-GYN Physicians, General Surgeons and Internists are the groups accounting for the largest number of panel requests.

SUPREME COURT DESIGNATIONS

During 1989, the Assistant Executive Secretary's office processed 725 designations for issuance through the Supreme Court of Virginia. This number is 102 greater (or 16%) than the 623 processed in 1988. Of the 725 designations issued, 624 (86%) were for circuit court cases, and 101 (14%) were for district court cases.

The 624 circuit court designations in 1989 represented an 11 percent increase over the number issued in 1988. This increase was primarily reflected in the number of requests for assistance (431 versus 363), a jump of almost 19 percent. In the three-judge court categories, there were increases in 1989 in the number of disbarment and Compensation Board panels. Certificate of pubic need cases fell dramatically from 16 in 1988 to one in 1989.

In 1989 the largest designation concentrations continued to be in the general assistance and disqualification categories, and this was true both at the circuit and district court levels. Of the total 599 single judge designations issued to circuit courts, 431 (or 72%) were for general assistance and 154 (26%) fell into the disqualification category. Both active and retired judges accepted designation appointments throughout the state.

For the last five years, the district courts have used lists prepared by the Assistant Executive Secretary's office when it is necessary to call retired and substitute judges for service. This decentralized system continues to function well. However, there are still many occasions when the Supreme Court must make a judicial assignment. In 1989, 42 direct requests for assistance were made to the Supreme Court (a small decrease from the number in 1988). However, a significant increase occurred in the district court disqualification number (59 versus 9). This is attributable in great measure to the long-running coal strike in Southwest Virginia. The local judges disqualified themselves, and a group of active and retired judges accepted designations to hear the backlog of strike cases in the Twenty-Ninth Judicial District.

The use of designated judges continues to be a critical factor in the judiciary's ongoing efforts to handle its increasing caseloads. Retired, recalled judges, both at the circuit and district court levels, impact significantly on the system and often help to avoid adding additional judges.

Caseload Summaries by Circuit and District

First Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Chesapeake is the sole locality in the First Judicial Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded 114,486 residents in the city, including 36,559 juveniles. According to the Department of Planning and Budget projections, the total population will increase by 24.9 percent to 143,000 in 1990. The juvenile population is projected to increase 9.9 percent to 40,187.

William L. Forbes and Russell I. Townsend, Jr. served the First Circuit Court in 1989. The 1990 General Assembly authorized an additional judgeship for the circuit as of July 1, 1990 and elected E. Preston Grissom of the juvenile and domestic relations district court to fill the position. Stephen L. Comfort and Robert R. Carter served the general district courts. An additional judgeship also was created in the general district court and Colon H. Whitehurst filled the position. E. Preston Grissom and James A. Leftwich served the juvenile and domestic relations courts . Frederick H. Creekmore was elected to fill the vacancy created by Judge Grissom's selection for the circuit judgeship. Judges in the district court used 85 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average of 21.25 days per judge, slightly lower than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

The First Circuit experienced a 5.6 percent increase in the number of commenced cases in 1989. A total of 4,027 cases were commenced: 2,349 civil cases and 1,678 criminal cases. These figures represent a 4.5 percent increase in the number of civil cases and a 5.8 percent jump in the number of criminal cases. The caseload distribution in the First was: 24 percent law, 34 percent equity, 27 percent felony, and 15 percent misdemeanor. This differed only slightly from the statewide distribution of 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge in the First was 1,678 cases. This was the sixth highest average caseload in the state. The average caseload statewide was 1,489 cases per judge. Among urban circuits, the average caseload was 1,515 cases per judge. The average civil caseload ranked second across the state, at 979 cases per judge. The state average civil caseload was 749 cases per judge. The urban average civil caseload was 801 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 699 cases per judge, and ranked nineteenth in the state. The average criminal caseload fell below the state average criminal caseload of 740 cases per judge and the urban average criminal caseload of 715 cases per judge. There was a 5.3 percent increase in the number of concluded cases in 1989. More than 3,600 cases were concluded: 1,995 civil cases and 1,681 criminal cases. Among civil cases, 4.1 percent were terminated in judge trials, and 2.3 percent were concluded in jury trials. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, and 1.6 percent were concluded in jury trials. More than 38 percent of criminal cases concluded in judge trials, while 5.2 percent were terminated in jury trials. Statewide, jury trials concluded 4.6 percent of criminal cases and judge trials terminated 25.8 percent. Nine more juries were impaneled in 1989 than in 1988, an 11.3 percent increase, from 80 to 89 juries impaneled.

Second Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Virginia Beach and the counties of Accomack and Northampton are served by the Second Judicial Circuit. According to the 1980 Census, there were 262,199 residents in this area. By 1990, the Department of Planning and Budget projects that the population will increase by 38.5 percent, to 363,600, including 94,828 juveniles.

The nine authorized judgeships in the Second Circuit were filled in 1989 by: N. Wescott Jacob, Alan E. Rosenblatt, Austin E. Owen, Philip L. Russo, H. Calvin Spain, Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Edward W. Hanson, Jr., John K. Moore, and Thomas S. Shadrick. A tenth judgeship was authorized during the 1990 legislative session and it will be filled as of October 1, 1990 by Robert B. Cromwell, Jr. John B. Preston, R. Stanley Hudgins, Robert L. Simpson, Jr., Virginia L. Cochran, J. Dale Bimson, and Donald H. Rhodes served the Second District Court. Judge Rhodes resigned May 1, 1990 and was replaced by Thomas M. Ammons III in the same month. Judge Bimson joined the court on July 1, 1989. Fred P. Aucamp, Jerome B. Friedman, J. Davis Reed, and Ronald H. Marks served the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The Second District used 264.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This is an average of 29.38 days per judge, higher than the state average of 25.18.

The number of commenced cases rose less than 1 percent in 1989, to 13,359. The drop was due to a 2.5 percent decline in commenced civil cases; criminal cases rose 5.8 percent. The 1989 average circuit caseload per judge was 1,484 cases. This was the fifteenth highest caseload in the state, and was nearly equal the statewide average caseload of 1,489 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload (634 cases per judge) ranked sixth in the state, and the average civil caseload (850 cases per judge) ranked twenty-fourth. Statewide, the average criminal caseloads were 740 criminal cases per judge and 749 civil cases per judge. Among urban circuits, the average caseloads were 715 criminal and 801 civil cases per judge. The caseload distribution in the Second Circuit ran: 26 percent law, 32 percent equity, 25 percent felony, and 18 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. There was a 16.1 percent increase in the number of concluded cases, and a 3.9 percent decrease in the number of pending cases. One percent of the 8,668 civil cases that were concluded in 1989 were concluded by jury trial. Judge trials concluded 7.3 percent of civil cases. Across the state, 1.6 percent of civil cases ended in jury trials, 11.1 percent in judge trials, and 62.4 percent within 12 months of filing. In the Second Circuit, 51 percent of civil cases were concluded within a year of filing. Almost 13 percent of the 5,261 concluded criminal cases were terminated in judge trials; 2.2 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, 4.6 percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, while 25.8 percent ended in judge trials. Within five months of filing, 72 percent of criminal cases in the Second Circuit were concluded. The state total was 76.9 percent of criminal cases concluded within five months. There was an 8.4 percent decline in the number of juries impaneled. One hundred eighty-five juries were impaneled in 1989; 17 less than in 1988.

The greatest increase in the general district caseload occurred among civil cases, which increased 15.1 percent, to 58,395 cases. Traffic cases, which comprised 54 percent of the caseload, rose 7.7 percent, to 110,298. The number of criminal cases remained about the same (+2.9 percent), at 36,281 cases in 1989. Criminal cases comprised 17 percent of the caseload. The resulting total general district caseload of 204,974 cases in 1989 represented an 8.8 percent increase over 1988. The average caseload of 34,162 cases per judge was ranked third in the state, nearly 9,000 cases above the state average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload also ranked third, at 18,383 cases per judge, compared to a statewide average traffic caseload of 13,484 cases per judge, and an urban average caseload of 14,926 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was ninth statewide, at 9,733 cases per judge (between the statewide average and urban average caseloads). The average criminal caseload in the Second, however, was the highest in the state. At 6,047 cases per judge, it was nearly 2,000 cases higher than the state average (4,258), and the urban average, (4,436) caseloads. The number of hearings in the Second rose 13.2 percent, to 211,779.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, 22,014 new cases were filed: 14,417 juvenile cases and 7,597 domestic relations cases. These numbers represented a 5.4 percent rise in total caseload, a 3.7 percent rise among juvenile cases, and an 8.6 percent increase among domestic relations cases. The total average caseload ranked third in the state, at 5,504 cases per judge. The statewide average was 4,044 cases per judge. The average among urban districts was 4,314 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload ranked second in the state, and, at 3,604 cases per judge, also surpassed the state and urban average juvenile caseloads, at 2,435 cases per judge and 2,731 cases per judge, respectively. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,899 cases per judge ranked twelfth in the state. Statewide, the average domestic relations caseload was 1,609 cases per judge. Among urban districts, the average domestic relations caseload was 1,583 cases per judge.

Over 64,000 processes were issued in the Second, by 21 magistrates, in 35,646 recorded activity hours. A 94.8 percent issuance rate among probable cause hearings resulted in 36,283 processes issued. Bond hearings, with a 52.7 percent issuance rate, resulted in 16,919 processes issued. Thirty-one civil warrants were issued, and 10,982 other processes were issued.

The City of Portsmouth is served by the Third Judicial Circuit. According to the 1980 Census, there were 104,577 residents in Portsmouth, 30,024 of which were juveniles. By 1990, the population is projected to increase by 9.8 percent to 114,800. The juvenile population is expected to decrease 12.1 percent to 26,382.

Dennis F. McMurran, William H. Oast, Jr., and L. Cleaves Manning served the circuit court in Portsmouth. On July 1, 1989 Judge Richard S. Bray began service in the newly created judgeship position. Archie Elliott, Jr., Stanley L. Morris, Jr., and James A. Cales, Jr., served the general district court, while Cecil W. Johnson and Von L. Piersall presided over the juvenile and domestic court. The general district court judges used 25 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges, an average of 5 days per judge. As in 1988, the Third had the lowest average in the state in terms of substitute days per judge. The state average was 25.18 days per judge.

Five thousand five hundred thirty-four (5,534) cases commenced in the Third Circuit, an increase of 1.1 percent over 1988. Slightly more than 5,000 cases were concluded, a 16.7 percent decline from 1988, and pending cases totaled 8,690: an increase of 6.4 percent. The caseload distribution in the Third was: 19 percent law, 17 percent equity, 37 percent felony, and 27 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload ranked twenty-third of 32 circuits in the state, at 1,384 cases per judge. The statewide average caseload was 1,489 cases per judge. The average caseload among urban circuits was 1,515 cases per judge. The average civil caseload ranked thirty-first statewide, at 495 cases per judge. The average civil caseload among urban circuits was 801 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked tenth statewide and, at 889 cases per judge, was above the state average criminal caseload of 740 cases per judge, and the urban average caseload of 715 cases per judge. Less than 1 (0.6) percent of the concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, and the same percent were ended by jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, 1.6 percent in jury trials. Of the 2,804 concluded criminal cases, 35.9 percent were terminated by judge trial, 5 percent in jury trial. Statewide, the figures were 25.8 and 4.6 percent, respectively. Just under one-quarter (23.4 percent) of civil cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time periods. One hundred seventy juries were impaneled in 1989: 13 less than in 1988.

New cases filed in general district court rose 4.1 percent, to 61,772 cases in 1989. The average general district caseload of 20,591 cases per judge ranked twenty-third in the state, below the state average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge and the urban average caseload of 29,580 cases per judge. The increase in new cases came among civil cases. At 34,010, new civil cases comprised 55 percent of the docket and registered a 13.5 percent increase over 1988. The average civil caseload of 11,337 cases per judge was the sixth highest in the state, more than 1,000 cases higher than the urban average traffic caseload. Criminal cases (18 percent of the docket) decreased 4.9 percent, to 11,091 cases. The average criminal caseload was 3,697 cases per judge, and ranked twenty-third statewide. Traffic cases decreased 5.7 percent, to 16,671 cases. The average traffic caseload also ranked thirtieth, at 5,557 cases per judge. The state average caseloads for criminal and traffic cases were 4,258 cases per judge, and 13,484 cases per judge, respectively. Hearings increased 5.7 percent in the Third District, to 82,044.

New cases totaling 7,477 were filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1989. This represents a 0.8 percent decline from 1988. The average caseload of 3,739 cases per judge ranked twenty-second in the state, below the urban average caseload of 4,314 cases per judge. Juvenile cases, which comprised 45 percent of the docket, dropped 3.4 percent, to 3,356 cases. The average juvenile caseload of 1,678 ranked twenty-eighth in the state, below the urban average juvenile caseload of 2,731 cases per judge. A 1.4 percent increase was recorded among domestic relations cases, of which 4,121 were filed in 1989. The average domestic relations caseload of 2,061 was the ninth highest in the state, nearly 500 cases higher than the urban average domestic relations caseload of 1,583 cases per judge.

Seven magistrates in the Third District recorded 11,076 activity hours, 25,293 transactions, and 19,032 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 10,370 processes issued; bond hearings resulted in 6,732 processes issued. The issuance rate among these hearings was 87.8 percent and 58.4 percent, respectively. Nine civil warrants were issued; 1,921 other processes were issued.

Fourth Judicial Circuit and District

The Fourth Judicial Circuit serves the city of Norfolk. According to the 1980 Census, the population was 266,876 residents, of which 65,613 were juveniles. The total population is expected to increase to 274,700 by 1990. The juvenile population, however, is expected to decrease by 10.4 percent, to 58,783, by 1990.

Nine judges served the circuit court in 1989: John E. Clarkson, Thomas R. McNamara, Jerome James, Robert W. Stewart, Alfred E. Whitehurst, John W. Winston, Leonard B. Sachs, Lydia C. Taylor, and John C. Morrison, Jr. Charles R. Cloud, Lawrence C. Lawless, Fred E. Martin, Jr., Joseph H. Campbell, Reid M. Spencer, and Luther C. Edmonds sat on the general district court bench. Judges Charles E. Poston, James H. Flippen, Jr., and Lester V. Moore, Jr., served on the juvenile and domestic relations court. They will be joined on July 1, 1990 by Everett A. Martin, Jr., who was elected by the 1990 General Assembly to fill a newly created position for the court. The Fourth District judges used 289 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. They used an average of 32.11 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the circuit court dropped 4.3 percent in 1989, to reach 12,846 cases. The number of concluded cases rose 3.7 percent, and pending cases rose 3.1 percent, to 12,151. Civil cases made up 5,609 of the commenced cases; criminal cases made up the remaining 7,237. The caseload distribution was: 27 percent law, 16 percent equity, 38 percent felony, and 18 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload among the circuit court judges was 1,427. This was below the state average caseload per judge of 1,489 and the urban average caseload of 1,515. The average civil caseload (623 cases per judge) and the average criminal caseload (804 cases per judge) were also below state and urban averages. Of the 5,168 civil cases that were concluded in 1989, just over 10 percent were concluded by a judge trial; 2.7 percent were concluded by jury. Of the 7,316 concluded criminal cases, 7.3 percent were terminated by a judge trial, 2.8 percent by jury. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, while 1.6 percent were terminated in a jury trial. Of criminal cases statewide, 25.8 percent were concluded by judge trial, 4.6 percent by jury trial. About 57 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months. Sixty-nine percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. The number of juries impaneled in 1989 was 33.2 percent higher than in 1988.

New cases in the general district court fell 5.4 percent, to 194,469 cases in 1989. The largest decrease came in traffic cases, which made up 35 percent of the caseload, and, at 67,163 cases, showed a 16.3 percent decline in 1989. Criminal cases dropped 7.8 percent, to 34,409. Criminal cases were 18 percent of the caseload. Civil cases, 48 percent of the caseload, rose 5.5 percent, to 92,897. The number of hearings rose 0.4 percent, to 227,428. The average general district caseload in the Fourth District was 32,412 new cases per judge, above both the state average (25,992 case per judge) and the average for judges in urban districts (29,580 cases per judge). The caseload average for traffic cases was also below the state and urban averages, at 10,194 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload, however, ranked third in the state, and, at 5,735 cases per judge, was above both the state and urban averages of 4,258 and 4,436 case per judge, respectively. The average civil caseload also topped the state and urban averages. At 15,483 civil cases per judge, the Fourth's civil caseload was the second highest in the state. The state average civil caseload was 8,250 cases; the urban average civil caseload: 10,217 cases per judge.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, juvenile cases rose 9.6 percent, to 9,615, while domestic relations cases rose 7.4 percent, to 5,912. The resulting total of 15,527 new cases represents an 8.8 percent increase over 1988. The average domestic relations caseload ranked tenth in the state. The average caseload of 1,971 domestic relations cases per judge was above the state average of 1,609 and the urban average of 1,583. The average juvenile caseload of 3,205 ranked fifth in the state and was above the state (2,435 cases) and urban (2,731 cases) averages.

The 13 magistrates of the Fourth issued 34,222 processes in 22,516 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings, in which there was an 81.9 percent issuance rate, accounted for 21,953 of issued processes. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 36.9 percent, resulted in 10,921 processes issued. Other processes accounted for the remaining 1,348.

Fifth Judicial Circuit and District

The cities of Suffolk and Franklin and the counties of Isle of Wight and Southampton make up the Fifth Judicial Circuit. In 1980, the Census recorded 95,263 residents in this area, including 27,750 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase 11.7 percent, to 106,400. However, this increase is expected in Suffolk, Franklin and Isle of Wight only. A 1.8 percent decrease in population is projected for Southampton county. The total juvenile population across the area is expected to decrease 10.2 percent, to 24,908 by 1990.

Serving the Fifth Circuit in 1989 were Judges E. Everett Bagnell, James C. Godwin, and Westbrook J. Parker. Robert B. Edwards and William W. Jones served the general district courts, and William R. Moore, Jr., and R.D. Hunter, III, served the juvenile and domestic relations bench. Judge Jones retired from the general district bench February 1, 1990 and was replaced by G. Blair Harry, who was elected by the 1990 General Assembly to fill the vacancy.

There were 4,360 commenced cases in the Fifth Circuit in 1989: a 12.1 percent increase over the previous year. Civil cases in the circuit rose 6.9 percent, to 1,463 cases. Criminal cases increased 14.9 percent, to 2,897 cases. The distribution of the caseload was: 16 percent law, 18 percent equity, 47 percent felony, and 19 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload in the Fifth Circuit was 1,677 cases per judge. The average caseload statewide was 1,489 cases per judge. Among rural circuits, the average caseload was 1,452 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was 563 cases per judge. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 749 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 1,114 cases per judge ranked first among thirty-one circuits. It was about 400 cases above the rural average criminal caseload of 776 cases per judge. There were 4,056 cases concluded in 1989, a 30.4 percent increase over 1988. Among concluded civil cases, 2.1 percent were terminated in jury trials and 5.2 percent were terminated in judge trials. These proportions are comparable to the state totals of 1.6 percent concluded in jury trials and 12.8 percent concluded in judge trials. Among the 2,791 criminal cases that were concluded in 1989, 33.2 percent were terminated in a judge trial and 2.5 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, 4.6 percent of criminal cases concluded in jury trials, 25.8 percent in judge trials. Almost 68 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months; 66.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these periods. Eighty-two juries were impaneled in 1989, the same number as in 1988.

In general district court, new cases increased 5.8 percent in 1989, to 57,614 cases filed. The number of new criminal cases rose 12.7 percent, to 9,643 new cases, the number of traffic cases, which comprised 54 percent of the total caseload, rose 3.4 percent, to 31,102 new cases, and new civil cases also rose, 6.4 percent to 16,869 new cases. The average caseload in the Fifth general district court was 28,807 cases per judge. This was above the state average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 21,750 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 4,822 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload was 15,551 cases per judge, and the average civil caseload was 8,435 cases per judge. The criminal and civil caseloads ranked twelfth in the state, the average traffic caseload ranked eighth. All of these averages surpassed statewide and rural averages. The rural average caseloads were: 4,046 criminal, 11,780 traffic, and 5,924 civil cases per judge. There were 60,839 hearings held in 1989, a 7.3 percent rise from 1988.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, new cases fell 5.1 percent. Juvenile cases, representing 46 percent of the caseload, fell 1.3 percent. Domestic relations cases fell 8.1 percent. The average caseload in the juvenile and domestic relations court in the Fifth was 3,049 cases per judge. The average caseload among rural districts was 3,782 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 1,401 cases per judge was also below state and rural averages, but the average domestic relations caseload of 1,648 cases per judge surpassed the state and rural averages. The rural averages were: 2,149 juvenile and 1,633 domestic relations cases per judge.

Ten magistrates recorded 16,980 activity hours, 19,881 transactions and 16,387 processes issued in 1989. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 96.5 percent, resulted in 9,765 processes issued. Bond hearings recorded an issuance rate of 64.8 percent, and resulted in 5,711 processes issued. Statewide, the issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 86.9 percent, and among bond hearings, 60.8 percent.

Sixth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry and Sussex as well as the cities of Emporia and Hopewell comprise the Sixth Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded a population in this area of 97,425 residents, including 29,085 juveniles. The Department of Planning and Budget predicts that, by 1990, the total population will increase by 5.6 percent to 102,900, while the juvenile population will decrease 12.4 percent to 25,484.

William P. Lemmond, Jr., and Robert G. O'Hara, Jr., served the circuit courts in the seven localities of the Sixth Circuit during 1989. John C. Baker, James A. Luke and Kenneth W. Nye served the general district court. Presiding in the juvenile and domestic relations courts were Samuel E. Campbell and C.A. Perkinson. The judges of the Sixth District used 53.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 13.40 days per judge was nearly half the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

In the Sixth Circuit court, the number of commenced civil cases decreased by 2.9 percent, to 1,121, while the number of commenced criminal cases increased 13.1 percent, to 1,330. In total, 2,451 cases were commenced in the circuit, an increase of 5.1 percent over 1988. The circuit caseload distribution of 18 percent law, 27 percent equity, 47 percent felony and 8 percent misdemeanor differed from the statewide distribution of 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average per judge caseload of 1,226 cases was ranked twenty-eighth in the state, below the state average caseload of 1,489 cases per judge, and below the average caseload among rural circuits of 1,452 cses per judge. The average caseload among civil cases ranked twenty-ninth in the state, at 561 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Sixth fell below the average civil caseload statewide (749 cases per judge) and the average civil caseload among rural circuits (676 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-second among 31 circuits. At 665 criminal cases per judge, it was below the state average criminal caseload (740 cases per judge) and the rural average criminal caseload of 776 cases per judge. One thousand four hundred two (1,402) criminal cases and 1,028 civil cases were concluded in 1989. Just over 3 percent of the concluded criminal cases were terminated by a jury trial and 35 percent were concluded after a judge trial. Among civil cases, 17.7 percent were concluded by judge trials and 2.2 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, judge trials terminated 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases and 25.8 percent of concluded criminal cases. Jury trials ended 1.6 percent of civil cases and 4.6 percent of criminal cases statewide. Within 12 months, 71.1 percent of civil cases were concluded. Almost 81 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded in twelve months, and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Forty-six juries were impaneled in 1989, four less than in 1988.

New cases in the general district courts decreased 4.1 percent. The largest decrease was among traffic cases, which fell 6 percent, to 42,887 new cases filed. Traffic cases comprised 72 percent of the total caseload. Criminal cases, which comprised 11 percent of the caseload, fell 2 percent, to 6,328, and civil cases (17 percent of the caseload rose 3.4 percent, to 10,223 new cases filed. The total general district caseload of 59,438 resulted in an average caseload per judge of 19,813 cases. This average ranked twenty-sixth among state districts, well below the state average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge and below the rural average caseload of 21,750 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked thirty-first, at 2,109 cases per judge. The state average criminal caseload was 4,258 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload ranked thirteenth, at 14,296 cases per judge, and the average civil caseload ranked twenty-ninth, at 3,408 cases per judge. Statewide, these average caseloads were 13,484 traffic cases and 8,250 civil cases per judge. Among rural districts, the average caseloads were 11,780 traffic and 5,924 civil cases per judge. There was a 5.2 percent rise in the number of hearings held in the Sixth District in 1989. Over 58,000 hearings were held, as compared to 55,514 in 1988.

There was a 6.2 percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in the Sixth in 1989. In 1989, 5,438 cases were filed in the Sixth: 3,004 juvenile cases and 2,434 domestic relations cases. Juvenile cases comprised 55 percent of the caseload, and among juvenile cases, a 4.1 percent decrease occurred. However, domestic relations cases, while comprising only 45 percent of the caseload, rose 22.6 percent from 1988. The total average caseload, the juvenile average caseload, and the domestic relations average caseload ranked thirty-first, thirtieth and twenty-sixth, respectively. These average caseloads were: 2,719 total cases per judge; 1,502 juvenile cases per judge, and 1,217 domestic relations cases per judge. Each of these caseloads were below the state average caseloads, and below the average caseload for rural districts: 3,782 cases total; 2,149 cases, juvenile, and 1,633 cases, domestic relations.

Eighteen magistrates in the Sixth District recorded 21,340 activity hours, 24,931 transactions, and 19,735 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 9,090 processes issued, bond hearings resulted in 5,895 processes issued, and 35 civil warrants and 4,715 other processes were issued. The rate of issuance among probable cause hearings was 78.9 percent, compared to 86.9 percent statewide. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 74 percent, just below the state rate of 60.8 percent.

Seventh Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Newport News is served by the Seventh Judicial Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded 144,903 residents in this area, including 41,233 juveniles. The total population is expected to increase by 13.9 percent by 1990, to 165,100. The juvenile population is projected to decrease to 38,442, a 6.8 percent decline.

Douglas M. Smith, J. Warren Stephens, and Fred W. Bateman served the Seventh Circuit Court in 1989. Judge Bateman retired on April 1, 1989 and was replaced by Robert W. Curran, who was elected from the general district court bench. Judge Smith retired January 1, 1990 and was replaced by Randolph T. West, who was also elected from the general district bench. Serving on the general district court bench with Judge Curran and Judge West was James H. Harvell. Joan T. Beale and David F. Pugh replaced Judge Curran and Judge West, respectively. Robert F. Frank and Robert M. Yacobi served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Judges in the district court used 189.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average of 37.92 days per judge, slightly higher than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

There were 5,387 commenced cases in the Seventh, a 17.2 percent rise over 1988. Just over 2,700 of these were civil cases; 2,684 were criminal cases. These groups rose 11.5 percent and 23.5 percent, respectively. The number of concluded cases rose 5.5 percent, to 4,629. Law cases were 26 percent of the caseload, equity cases were 24 percent, felony cases, 34 percent, and misdemeanor, 16 percent. The state distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge ranked second in the state, at 1,796. This was above both the state average (1,489 cases per judge) and the urban average (1,515 cases per judge). The civil caseload of 901, and criminal caseload of 895 cases per judge, also ranked above the state and urban average for circuits in Virginia. Among civil cases that were concluded, 7.8 percent ended in a judge trial, and 1.6 percent ended by jury trial. About 75 percent were concluded within 12 months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Among concluded criminal cases, 23.7 percent were ended by judge trial, 1.3 percent by jury. Just over 81 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. This is higher than the state total of 76.9 percent of criminal cases concluded in five months. Fifty juries were impaneled in 1989, a 47.1 percent increase over 1988.

In the general district court, 90,327 new cases were recorded: 19 percent of which were criminal, 35 percent traffic, and 45 percent civil. Statewide, the distribution of new general district court cases was: 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. Total new cases increased almost 12 percent in 1989. Criminal cases increased 10 percent, traffic cases increased 20.8 percent, while new civil cases rose 6.6 percent. The judges of the Seventh District averaged 30,109 cases each in 1989, the ninth highest average among the 32 districts. The average caseload of traffic cases in the Seventh ranked twenty-second in the state, at 10,693 cases per judge. The state average was 13,484; the urban average was 14,926. The average criminal caseload of 5,664 ranked fourth in the state, and, the average civil caseload (13,752 cases per judge) ranked fourth.

There were 8,782 new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court: a 4.4 percent decline from 1988. Forty-five percent (3,976) of these new cases were juvenile cases; 4,806 were domestic relations cases. The statewide distribution was 60 percent juvenile, 40 percent domestic relations. Domestic violence cases in the Seventh rose 1.1 percent in 1989. Juvenile cases dropped 10.2 percent. The average domestic relations caseload of 2,403 was the third highest in the state. The average juvenile caseload of 1,988 ranked twenty-third.

Six magistrates logged 10,276 activity hours in 1989, recording 38,506 transactions and issuing 25,658 processes. No civil warrants were issued, 1,626 miscellaneous processes were issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 16,686 processes, bond hearings resulted in 7,345 processes issued. The Seventh had an issuance rate of 79.6 percent after probable cause hearings, and 46.4 percent after bond hearings. State rates were 86.9 percent issuance after probable cause hearings, and 60.8 percent after bond hearings.

Eighth Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Hampton is served by the Eighth Judicial Circuit. According to the 1980 Census, there were 122,617 residents in Hampton. Juveniles accounted for 35,639 of these residents. By 1990, it is projected that the population will decrease to 128,700, including 31,895 juveniles. This is a projected 10.5 percent decline in total population.

The Eighth Circuit Court was served by Nelson T. Overton, John D. Gray, and Walter J. Ford. Henry D. Kashouty, Wilford Taylor, Jr., and Thomas H. Wilson, II served on the general district bench. Effective January 1, 1990, Judge Wilson retired and was replaced by William C. Andrews, III. The juvenile and domestic relations bench was served by Louis R. Lerner and Nelson T. Durden. The Eighth used 109.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This is an average of 21.96 days per judge, which was lower than the state average of 25.18 days.

In 1989, there were 4.5 percent fewer commenced circuit cases than in 1988. This represents a 183 case decrease, to 3,900 cases. Civil cases decreased by 13.4 percent, but criminal cases increased 5.7 percent. The 1989 total number of civil and criminal cases was 1,883 and 2,017, respectively. Circuit cases were distributed nearly evenly across the docket: 21 percent law, 27 percent equity, 24 percent felony, and 28 percent misdemeanor. The statewide distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload was 1,300 per judge. The average civil caseload was 628 cases, while the average criminal caseload was 672 cases per judge. These average caseloads all ranked in the lower half among circuits in Virginia. Civil cases were concluded 11.7 percent of the time by judge trial, 1.4 percent by jury. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were ended by judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury. Among criminal cases, 19.7 percent were terminated by judge trial, 1.9 percent by jury. These figures differ more from the statewide totals of 25.8 percent judge, 4.6 percent jury. Fifty-nine juries were impaneled in Hampton in 1989, four more than in 1988.

Tenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Tenth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Prince Edward, and the city of South Boston. The 1980 Census reported a population of 138,585 residents, of which 39,685 were juveniles. The number of residents is expected to increase by 3.9 percent to a total population of 145,000 by 1990. However, the juvenile population is predicted to decline to 25,000, an 11.8 percent reduction.

The Tenth Judicial Circuit has two authorized judgeships, which were filled in 1989 by Charles L. McCormick, III, and John R. Snoddy, Jr. William Hay, Jr., Robert B. Spencer, Jr., and Irvin D. Sugg sat in the general district courts and judges William L. Wellons and Harry G. Lawson served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. Judges in the district courts used 78.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average of 15.68 days per judge, considerably lower than the state average.

In the Tenth Circuit, 3,248 cases were commenced in 1989. This represents a 15.7 percent increase over 1988. The increase in cases occurred among criminal cases, which jumped 34.7 percent, to 1,827 cases. Civil cases fell 2.1 percent, to 1,827. Twenty-five percent of the circuit caseload was comprised of equity cases; 19 percent were law cases; 40 percent were felony cases and 16 percent were misdemeanor cases. Statewide, 34 percent of commenced cases were felony; 16 percent were misdemeanor, 24 percent were law, and 27 percent were equity cases. The average caseload in the Tenth Circuit was 1,624 cases. This caseload ranked eleventh among the 31 Circuits, and was higher than the average caseload statewide (1,489 cases per judge) and among rural districts (1,452 cases per judge). The average civil caseload ranked seventeenth in the state, and at 711 cases per judge, was higher than the rural average civil caseload (676 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload was 914 cases per judge. This caseload ranked sixth in the state, well above the rural average criminal caseload of 776 cases per judge. Concluded cases increased 16.3 percent in 1989; 3,232 cases were concluded: 1,440 civil and 1,792 criminal. Judge trials concluded 8.1 percent of civil cases and 26.2 percent of criminal cases. Statewide, judge trials ended 11.1 percent of civil cases and 25.8 percent of criminal cases. Jury trials concluded 0.8 percent of civil cases and 2 percent of criminal cases, compared to statewide totals of 1.6 and 4.6 percent, respectively. More than 66 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Just under 77 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases are concluded within these periods. The number of juries impaneled in 1989 was 51: four less than were impaneled in 1988.

In general district court, 57,104 new cases were filed. This represents a decrease of only 0.8 percent from 1988. However, this decrease was not evenly distributed across the caseload. Criminal cases jumped 24.9 percent, to 8,764 cases, and civil cases rose 8.3 percent, to 17,701 cases while traffic cases fell 10.4 percent, to 30,639 cases. Criminal cases comprised 15 percent of the total caseload. Traffic cases comprised 54 percent of the total caseload, and the remaining 31 percent of the caseload were civil cases. The average general district caseload of 19,035 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh in the state, and was more than 4,000 cases higher than the state average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload and the average civil caseload ranked twenty-fourth and twentieth among state districts. At 10,213 traffic cases per judge and 5,900 civil cases per judge, these average caseloads were below their average rural counterparts of 11,780 traffic and 5,924 civil cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 2,921 cases per judge was ranked twenty-ninth in the state, below the rural average criminal caseload of 4,046 cases per judge and the statewide average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge. The number of hearings in 1989 (51,378) represented a 2.8 percent increase over 1988.

There was a 15.2 percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1989. Juvenile cases rose 8.4 percent in the district, to 4,181 new cases. Domestic relations cases increased 23.1 percent, to 4,315 new cases. Juvenile cases and domestic relations cases each comprised 50 percent of the total caseload of 8,316 new cases. The average caseload of 4,158 cases per judge was the fourteenth highest in the state. It was 100 cases higher than the state average caseload per judge of 4,004. The average juvenile caseload of 2,091 ranked twenty-first in the state, and fell below the state average juvenile caseload (2,435 cases per judge).

Twenty-three magistrates served the Tenth District in 1989. These magistrates recorded 25,310 activity hours, 27,549 transactions, and 21,563 processes issued. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 81.1 percent, resulted in 9,375 processes issued. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 60.7 percent, resulted in 5,133 processes issued. Statewide the issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 86.9 percent; among bond hearings, the state issuance rate was 60.8 percent. More than 6,500 civil warrants were issued, and 508 other processes.

Eleventh Judicial Circuit and District

The Eleventh Judicial Circuit encompasses the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan, and the City of Petersburg. The 1980 Census reported a total of 99,790 residents in the area, including 28,276 juveniles. The total population is expected to increase only 1.3 percent, to 101,100 residents by 1990. The juvenile population is expected to decline by more than 10 percent, to 25,425 juveniles by the year 1990.

The Eleventh Circuit has two authorized judgeships, which were filled in 1989 by Oliver A. Pollard, Jr. and Thomas V. Warren. James F. D'Alton and Richard F. Lewis, Jr., served the Eleventh's general district courts. The juvenile and domestic relations court was served by Larry G. Elder and L.L. Mason, Jr. The Eleventh District used 103.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This averages to 25.85 days per judge, slightly higher than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

While the total number of commenced cases increased 13.4 percent in 1989, the number of commenced civil cases increased only 6.1 percent. However, the number of commenced criminal cases increased 19.2 percent. The 1989 totals were: 1,357 civil cases and 1,901 criminal cases commenced. Eight percent of the total caseload was comprised of misdemeanor cases: 20 percent were law cases, 22 percent were equity cases, and 50 percent were felony cases. Across the state, cases in circuit court were distributed as follows: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge in the Eleventh circuit was 1,629 cases. This caseload average ranked ninth in the state, and was higher than both the statewide average caseload of 1,489 cases per judge and the average caseload among rural circuits of 1,452 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 679 cases per judge ranked nineteenth in the state; the average criminal caseload ranked fourth, at 951 cases per judge. The average caseloads in rural circuits were 676 civil cases and 776 criminal cases per judge. The number of concluded cases rose 3.3 percent in 1989, to 2,796 cases. Among the 1,083 concluded civil cases, 5.1 percent were terminated in a judge trial and 0.9 percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, and 1.6 percent were ended in jury trials. In the Eleventh circuit, 67.5 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within one year. Just over 5 percent of the 1,713 concluded criminal cases terminated in jury trials, compared with 4.6 percent statewide. Almost 36 percent of criminal cases were ended in judge trials, compared to 25.8 percent statewide. Within five months, 73.7 percent of criminal cases were concluded in the Eleventh. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded in that time. Seventy-seven juries were impaneled in 1989, a 12.5 percent decrease from 1988.

In general district court, 45,240 new cases were filed. This represents a 1.9 percent decline from 1988. Criminal cases comprised 24 percent of the district caseload, and increased 9.9 percent, to 10,622 cases. Traffic cases, 48 percent of the caseload, showed a 10.1 percent decrease, to 21,934 cases. Civil cases increased 5.1 percent, to 12,684 new cases: 28 percent of the total caseload. The average caseload per judge of 22,620 cases per judge ranked twentieth among the 32 districts. The statewide average caseload per judge was 25,992 cases. Among rural districts, the average caseload per judge was 21,750 cases. The average criminal caseload (5,311 cases per judge) ranked eighth in the state. The average criminal caseload among rural districts was 4,046 cases per judge. The Eleventh District ranked twenty-first in average traffic caseload, at 10,967 cases per judge. The state average traffic caseload was 13,484 cases per judge; the rural average traffic caseload was 11,780 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the district (6,342 cases per judge) ranked seventeenth statewide. The state and rural average civil caseloads were 8,250 and 5,924 cases per judge, respectively. Hearings rose 6.8 percent in 1989, to 55,906.

The 2,977 new juvenile cases and 2,883 new domestic relations cases filed in 1989 resulted in a total juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 5,680 new cases, a 4.3 percent increase over 1988. The average district caseload per judge was 2,930 cases, 800 below the rural average of 3,782 cases. Juvenile cases decreased 5.5 percent in 1989, and the average juvenile caseload ranked last statewide, at 1,489 juvenile cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload among rural districts was 2,149 cases per judge. Domestic relations cases increased 17 percent in 1989, resulting in an average domestic relations caseload of 1,442 cases per judge. This average caseload ranked twenty-first in the state. The rural average domestic relations caseload was 1,633 cases per judge. Juvenile cases comprised 51 percent of the total caseload; domestic relations cases made up the remaining 49 percent of the caseload. The statewide distribution of juvenile and domestic relations cases was 60 percent juvenile, 40 percent domestic relations cases.

The 14 magistrates of the Eleventh District issued 24,133 processes in 18,804 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings resulted in 12,172 processes issued, 10,552 processes were issued as a result of bond hearings, 49 civil warrants were issued, and 1,360 other processes were issued. The issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 84.9 percent. Among bond hearings the issuance rate was 78.5 percent. Statewide, 86.9 percent of probable cause hearings and 60.8 percent of bond hearings resulted in processes issued.

The average criminal caseload of 774 cases per judge ranked thirteenth among 31 circuits, and was slightly higher than the state average criminal caseload of 740 cases per judge. The 1989 caseload distribution in the Thirteenth was: 38 percent law, 13 percent equity, 39 percent felony, and 10 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution ran: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. Nearly 4 percent of the 5,381 civil cases concluded in 1989 were ended in a jury trial. Fifteen and one-half percent concluded in a judge trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases terminated in a judge trial, 1.6 percent in a jury trial. Of the 5,667 concluded criminal cases, 15.5 percent ended in a judge trial, 12.2 percent in a jury trial. Statewide totals are 25.8 and 4.6 percent, respectively. Over three-quarters of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, while 90.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within the respective time periods. Five hundred thirty-nine juries were impaneled in 1989, a 17.7 percent increase over 1988.

In general district court, 248,070 new cases were filed. Criminal cases rose 3.7 percent, to 33,756 new cases, traffic cases jumped 7.2 percent, to 64,597 new cases, and the number of new civil cases increased 3 percent, to 149,717 new cases. Overall, the general district caseload increased by 4.2 percent. The average criminal caseload ranked fifteenth statewide, at 4,220 cases. The average traffic caseload ranked twenty-eighth, at 8,075. However, the average civil caseload was the highest in the state, at 18,715 cases per judge. This was more than 10,000 cases per judge greater than the average civil caseload statewide, and more than 8,000 cases higher than the urban average civil caseload. The large number of civil cases helped push the overall average district caseload to seventh statewide, at 31,009 cases per judge. The average district caseload statewide was 25,992 cases, and the average district caseload among urban districts was 29,580 cases. The number of hearings in 1989 showed a 3.8 percent increase over 1988. Almost 236,000 hearings were held in the Thirteenth in 1989.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court dropped 4 percent, to 11,323 new cases. The greatest decrease came among domestic relations cases, which made up 43 percent of the caseload, and showed a 5.5 percent decrease, to 4,853 new cases. New juvenile cases totaled 6,470, a 2.8 percent drop over 1988. The average juvenile caseload of 2,157 cases per judge ranked nineteenth in the state, lower than the state average juvenile caseload of 2,435 cases per judge and the average juvenile caseload among urban districts, 2,731 cases per judge. The total juvenile and domestic relations caseload ranked twenty-first in the state. At 3,774 cases per judge, it was lower than the average juvenile and domestic relations caseload statewide (4,044 cases per judge) and among urban districts (4,314 cases per judge). The average domestic relations caseload was the eighteenth highest in the state, and at, 1,618 cases per judge, was close to the domestic relations caseload average statewide: 1,609 cases per judge.

The ten magistrates of the Thirteenth recorded 17,155 activity hours, 52,545 transactions, and 34,333 processes issued. Seventy-six civil warrants were issued. There were 28,150 probable cause hearings, resulting in 24,576 processes issued (an 87.6 percent issuance rate), and 23,962 bond hearings, resulting in 9,258 processes issued (a 38.6 percent issuance rate). Statewide, the issuance rate at probable cause hearings was 86.9 percent, at bond hearings, 60.8 percent.

Fourteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Fourteenth Judicial Circuit serves the county of Henrico. There were 180,700 residents in this area, according to the 1980 Census. Juveniles accounted for 46,880 of these residents. The population is projected to increase to 214,800 by 1990. The juvenile population is expected to decline 3.6 percent, to 45,169.

Judges James E. Kulp, Buford M. Parsons, Jr., George F. Tidey, and Joseph F. Spinella served the circuit court in 1989. Judge Spinella has announced his retirement, effective August 1, 1990 and will be replaced by Lee A. Harris, Jr., who serves on the district court bench. Serving on the general district bench with Judge Harris were Burnett Miller, III and Donald R. Howren. C. Rodney Chapman has been elected to fill the vacancy that will exist when Judge Harris moves to the circuit bench. The juvenile and domestic relations bench was served by Robert J. Smith and William G. Boice. Judge Boice replaced J. Mercer White, Jr., who retired May 1, 1989. A total of 135 days were used by the district court judges for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in a per judge average of 27 days.

Commenced circuit court cases increased 8.1 percent in 1989, to 5,623 cases. Concluded cases increased 6.7 percent, to 5,245. Civil cases accounted for 2,615 of the commenced cases; criminal cases accounted for the remaining 3,008. Civil cases increased only 0.4 percent, while criminal cases jumped 15.8 percent. The caseload distribution in the Fourteenth was: 20 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 19 percent misdemeanor. The law proportion was slightly lower and the misdemeanor proportion slightly higher than the statewide distribution of 24 percent and 16 percent. The average caseload per judge was 1,406 cases per judge, which ranked twenty-second in the state and was below the state and urban averages. The average civil caseload was 654 cases, which ranked twenty-first. The average criminal caseload was 752 cases, ranking fifteenth among the 32 circuits. Of the 2,234 concluded civil cases, 12.7 percent were terminated by a judge trial, 1.1 percent by jury trial. Almost half (44.5 percent) were concluded within 12 months. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury, and 62.4 percent were concluded within 12 months of filing. Of criminal cases in the Fourteenth, 21.4 percent were concluded in a judge trial, 3.3 percent ended with a jury trial, and 75.7 percent were concluded within five months. Statewide, the statistics were: 25.8 percent concluded by judge, 4.6 percent by jury, and 76.9 percent were concluded within five months. One hundred twenty-five juries were impaneled in the Fourteenth, an increase of 40.4 percent from 1988.

In the general district court, there were 79,384 new cases filed, an increase of less than 1 (0.9) percent from 1988. These cases were distributed: 11 percent criminal, 59 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. This compares to a statewide distribution of 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. There were 83,259 hearings in 1989, an increase of 7.1 percent. The general district court judges averaged 26,461 new cases each, above the statewide average of 25,992 cases, but below the urban average of 29,580 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload in the general district court was 2,945, which ranked twenty-eighth in the state, and was below the state average caseload of 4,258, and the urban average caseload of 4,436. The average traffic caseload was 15,496, while the average civil caseload was 8,021 cases per judge. These ranked ninth and fourteenth, respectively.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court decreased 8.7 percent, to 8,107 cases. The 4,850 new juvenile cases represented a 10.9 percent decrease, while domestic relations cases dropped 5.2 percent, to 3,257. The distribution of these cases matched the statewide distribution of 60 percent juvenile, 40 percent domestic relations. The juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 4,054 total new cases in 1989, just above the state average of 4,044 cases per judge, and below the urban average of 4,314. The judges in the Fourteenth district averaged 2,425 new juvenile cases and 1,629 new domestic relations cases each in 1989.

The magistrates of the Fourteenth recorded 14,976 activity hours, which resulted in 53,547 transactions and 48,425 processes issued. About one-quarter (12,086) of these processes were issued after probable cause hearings, 10,458 were for bonds, 85 civil warrants were issued, and 25,796 were for other processes. The issuance rate after probable cause hearings was 92.7 percent. After bond hearings, the issuance rate was 73.1 percent. Statewide, these issuance rates are 86.9 percent and 60.8 percent, respectively.

Fifteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg are served by the Fifteenth District. The 1980 Census reported a population of 218,886 residents of which 64,698 were juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 24.3 percent. The juvenile population is expected to increase by 10.2 percent to 71,304.

Unusual for a circuit/district, new judgeships were created for each court by the 1990 General Assembly. The Fifteenth Circuit Court was served in 1989 by Richard H.C. Taylor, William H. Ledbetter, Jr., Joseph E. Spruill, Jr., and J.M.H. Willis. Judge Willis was elected to a vacancy on the Court of Appeals and James W. Haley was selected to fill the vacancy. Judge Haley had served in the general district court. In addition, the legislature authorized an additional judgeship for the circuit beginning July 1, 1990. Judge J. Peyton Farmer, also serving on the general district court, was elected to fill the newly created position. Serving on the general district bench in addition to Judges Haley and Farmer were Tristam T. Hyde, IV, and John R. Stevens. Judges John W. Scott, Jr., Robert P. Beaver and Horace A. Revercomb, III were elected to fill the vacancies and new position. William J. Cox, Walter B. Fidler and J. Dean Lewis served the juvenile and domestic relations courts. They will be joined on July 1, 1990 by Nina K. Peace who was selected for the new judgeship position for the J&DR bench. Judges in the Fifteenth District used 278.8 days for retired, recalled and substitute judges. This is an average of 39.83 days per judge, higher than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

There were 6,968 cases commenced in the Fifteenth Circuit in 1989. This represents a 15.2 percent increase over 1988, when 6,046 cases were commenced. The number of civil cases rose 0.7 percent in 1989, to 3,375 cases commenced. The number of criminal cases in the circuit increased sharply: 33.4 percent, to 3,593 cases. There was a greater proportion of felony cases in the Fifteenth than statewide. In the Fifteenth, 36 percent of the caseload were felony cases, compared with 34 percent statewide. The proportion of law cases was lower in the Fifteenth: 20 percent of the caseload, compared to 24 percent statewide. Equity and misdemeanor cases were closer to the statewide proportions: 29 percent equity and 16 percent misdemeanor in the circuit, 27 and 16 percent statewide. The average caseload per judge of 1,742 cases ranked fourth among 31 circuits in the state. The average caseload was nearly 300 cases higher than the average caseload statewide of 1,489 cases per judge. At 898 cases per judge, the average criminal caseload ranked eighth in the state and was almost 100 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload of 740 cases per judge. This caseload surpassed the state average civil caseload of 749 cases per judge, and the average civil caseload among rural circuits: 676 cases per judge. The number of concluded cases rose 4.4 percent, to 5,943 in 1989. About 9 percent of 3,117 concluded civil cases ended in a judge trial. This rate is just under the state percentage of civil cases ending in judge trials (11.1 percent). Jury trials concluded one percent of civil cases, compared to 1.6 percent statewide. Judge trials concluded 38.4 percent of the 2,826 concluded criminal cases. This rate is also higher than the statewide rate of 25.8 percent of criminal cases concluding in judge trials. Jury trials concluded 3.3 percent of criminal cases in the Fifteenth, 4.6 percent of criminal cases statewide. Nearly 80 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months. Over 84 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time frames. One hundred fifteen juries were impaneled in 1989: 18 less than in 1988.

In general district court, 136,213 new cases were filed. This represents a 3.2 percent increase over 1988. There was little change (+2.1 percent) in the number of criminal cases in the district, which comprised 16 percent (21,782 cases) of the caseload. Traffic cases, of which there were 66,341, comprised just under half of the caseload and showed a 3.7 percent decline from 1988. The largest increase in new cases occurred among civil cases. Civil cases rose 15.3 percent, to 48,090 new cases. This represents 35 percent of the general district caseload. The average caseload in the Fifteenth District was 34,053 cases per judge. This caseload ranked fourth in the state and was higher than both the state average caseload of 25,992 cases and the rural average of 21,750 cases. The average criminal caseload ranked sixth statewide, at 5,446 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload of 16,585 cases per judge also ranked sixth statewide. The average caseload ranked fifth, at 12,012 cases per judge. These average caseloads were all above the statewide caseload averages, and the rural state averages of 4,046 criminal cases, 11,780 traffic cases, and 5,924 civil cases per judge. Hearings increased 8.4 percent, to 134,419 in 1989.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose 13.2 percent, to 15,486 new cases filed: 9,005 juvenile cases and 6,481 domestic relations cases. The district experienced a 6.9 percent increase among juvenile cases and a 23.3 percent increase among domestic relations cases. Both the average juvenile caseload (3,002 cases per judge) and the average domestic relations caseload (2,160 cases per judge) ranked seventh in the state, above the state averages of 2,435 and 1,609 cases, respectively, and the rural averages of 2,149 and 1,633 cases, respectively. The total district average caseload per judge was the fifth largest in the state. At 5,162 cases per judge, it was more than 1,000 cases higher than the state average, and almost 1,500 cases higher than the average caseload among rural districts.

The two dozen magistrates of the Fifteenth District recorded 39,765 activity hours, 46,290 transactions, and 36,371 processes issued in 1989. Probable cause hearings resulted in more than half (19,749) of the processes issued. Probable cause hearings had a 78.1 percent issuance rate. Bond hearings had an issuance rate of 80.1 percent and resulted in 13,691 of the issued processes. Two hundred seven civil warrants were issued.

Sixteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, Louisa, Madison and Orange and the City of Charlottesville comprise the Sixteenth Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 194,069 residents in the area, including 49,615 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase 15.5 percent, to 224,200. The juvenile population is projected to increase by 5 percent, to 52,114.

Lloyd C. Sullenberger, Elie Gerald Tremblay, F. Ward Harkrader, and Herbert A. Pickford, III served on the Sixteenth Circuit bench in 1989. Judge Tremblay retired March 1, 1990 and was replaced by general district court judge Paul M. Peatross, Jr. Judge Pickford will retire May 1, 1990 and will be replaced by Jay T. Swett. Also serving on the general district bench were judges William A. Talley, Jr., Stephen H. Helvin, and Franklin J. Jenkins. William G. Barkley was elected to fill the vacancy created by Judge Peatross's selection for the circuit court. The juvenile and domestic relations bench was served by Jannene L. Shannon and John R. Cullen, who replaced Judge William D. Reams on May 1, 1989. The judges of the Sixteenth District used 164 days for substitute, and retired, recalled judges. The district average of 27 days per judge was only slightly above the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the Sixteenth Circuit rose 13.1 percent in 1989, to 6,175 cases. The circuit average caseload of 1,544 cases per judge ranked fourteenth in the state, and was slightly higher than the statewide average circuit caseload of 1,489 cases per judge. Twenty-nine percent of the caseload was equity cases, 18 percent were law cases, 34 percent were felony cases, and 19 percent were misdemeanor cases. Statewide, the distribution of cases ran: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. Civil cases rose 4.2 percent, to a total of 2,904 cases in 1989. The average civil caseload in the circuit was 726 cases per judge. The average civil caseload statewide was 749 cases per judge, or 676 cases per judge among rural circuits in the state. Criminal cases in the Sixteenth rose 22.3 percent, to 3,271 cases. The resulting average circuit caseload of 818 criminal cases per judge ranked eleventh highest in the state, above the state average criminal caseload of 740 criminal cases per judge. A total of 5,558 cases were concluded in the Sixteenth in 1989: 2,686 civil cases and 2,872 criminal cases. Two percent of the concluded civil cases and 5.3 percent of concluded criminal cases were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, 1.6 percent of civil cases and 4.6 percent of criminal cases were concluded by jury trials. Trials by judges ended 8.6 percent of civil cases and 32.9 percent of criminal cases. Across the state, 11.1 percent of civil cases and 25.8 percent of criminal cases ended in this manner. More than 64 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62.4 percent statewide. Almost 80 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases concluded within that period. Two hundred seven juries were impaneled in 1989, 7.8 percent more than in 1988.

In general district court, 88,011 new cases were filed: 19,535 criminal cases, 47,343 traffic cases and 21,133 civil cases. Criminal cases showed a 6.8 percent increase over 1988, traffic cases showed a 4.6 percent increase, and civil cases rose 1.2 percent over 1988. As a result, the total caseload in the Sixteenth general district court rose 4.2 percent in 1989. The average district caseload of 22,003 cases per judge ranked twenty-second in the state. The average criminal caseload, at 4,884 cases per judge, was the eleventh highest in the state, more than 500 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge, and more than 800 cases higher than the average criminal caseload among rural districts: 5,046 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload (11,836 cases per judge) ranked seventeenth statewide, below the state (13,484 cases per judge) and just above the rural (11,780 cases per judge) average traffic caseloads. The average civil caseload ranked twenty-fourth in the state. At 5,283 civil cases per judge, it was much lower than the state average civil caseload of 8,250 cases per judge. Hearings rose 9.7 percent in 1989, to 101,268.

An 8.3 percent rise in juvenile cases and a 37.3 percent rise in domestic cases resulted in a total of 9,471 new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1989. The district caseload was almost evenly split (53/47 percent) between juvenile and domestic relations cases. The 5,021 juvenile cases resulted in an average juvenile caseload of 2,511 cases per judge: eleventh in the state, and above the state average juvenile caseload of 2,435 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload was also higher than the average juvenile caseload among rural districts: 2,149 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload was the fifth highest in the state, more than 500 cases higher than the state average domestic relations caseload (1,609 cases per judge).

Twenty-two magistrates issued 33,889 processes in 25,611 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings resulted in 23,390 processes issued, bond hearings resulted in 11,451 processes issued. Slightly more than 800 (836) civil warrants were issued. Probable cause hearings had an issuance rate of 91.1 percent; 68.1 percent bond hearings resulted in a process issued. Statewide, these issuance rates were 86.9 percent and 60.8 percent, respectively.

Seventeenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Seventeenth Judicial Circuit serves the county of Arlington and the city of Falls Church. Falls Church was included in the circuit's jurisdiction on January 1, 1988. According to the 1980 Census, the population of the district was 185,006 residents, including 26,777 juveniles. By 1990, the total population of the county is projected to climb to 166,000. The juvenile population is expected to decline to 23,100.

Paul F. Sheridan, William L. Winston, Thomas R. Monroe, and Benjamin N.A. Kendrick served the Seventeenth Circuit Court in 1989. Presiding in the general district court bench were: Francis Everett Thomas, Jr., Joseph C. Gwaltney, and Eleanor S. Dobson. Andrew B. Ferrari and Frank J. Ceseri served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The Seventeenth district used 166 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This averages to 33.2 days per judge, above the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases in the circuit court increased 2.5 percent over 1988, to 5,831 cases. The number of cases concluded rose 13.7 percent to 5,244. The number of civil cases commenced rose just three cases (0.1 percent), from 2,999 in 1988 to 3,002 in 1989. Criminal cases rose 5.1 percent, from 2,691 to 2,829. Distribution in the Seventeenth was 25 percent law, 27 percent equity, 43 percent felony, and 5 percent misdemeanor. The distribution of civil cases was close to the statewide distribution of 24 percent law and 27 percent equity, but statewide, the distribution of criminal cases was 34 percent felony and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge in the Seventeenth ranked nineteenth in the state, and, at 1,458, was slightly lower than the statewide average caseload of 1,489. The average civil caseload was 751 cases per judge, and ranked twelfth. The average criminal caseload ranked eighteenth in the state, at 701. Of the 2,960 civil cases that were concluded, 16.4 percent were ended by judge trial, and 1.9 percent by jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent ended by judge trial, and 1.6 percent by jury trial. Slightly more than 6 percent of the 2,284 criminal cases concluded were concluded by jury trial and 16.4 percent were terminated by judge trial. This compares with the state averages of 4.6 percent by jury and 25.8 percent by judge. Approximately one-half (45.8 percent) of civil cases were concluded in 12 months of filing. Of criminal cases, 66.3 percent were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time frames. The number of juries impaneled remained the same, at 189 juries.

In the general district courts, 105,017 new cases were filed. This represents a 0.2 percent decline from 1988. The new cases were distributed: 13 percent criminal, 72 percent traffic, and 15 percent civil. Statewide, the distribution was: 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. The Seventeenth ranked third in the state in the number of hearings held, with 112,605. This represents a 0.6 percent rise over 1988. The average caseload per judge was 35,006, second in the state, 9,000 cases higher than the statewide average caseload (25,992 cases per judge), and 5,500 cases higher than the urban average caseload (29,580 cases per judge). The average traffic caseload was also the second highest in the state, at 25,149. The average criminal caseload ranked thirteenth, at 4,476 cases per judge. This was slightly higher than state and urban criminal caseloads, at 4,258 and 4,436 cases per judge, respectively. The average civil caseload was 5,383 cases per judge, and ranked twenty-second in the state. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 8,250. Among urban districts, the average civil caseload was 10,217 cases per judge.

New cases in the juvenile and domestic relations court dropped 2.8 percent, to 4,539. Juvenile cases dropped 6.3 percent, to 3,489, but domestic relations cases rose 11 percent, to 1,050. The judges in the Seventeenth District averaged 2,270 juvenile and domestic relations cases each in 1989, the lowest caseload in the state. The average juvenile caseload of 1,745 was lower than the state average of 2,434. The domestic relations caseload ranked thirty-second among 32 districts in the state. At 525 cases per judge, it was less than one-third the state average of 1,609 and the urban average of 1,583 cases per judge. New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court were split 77/22 percent between juvenile and domestic relations cases.

The magistrates recorded 11,882 activity hours, resulting in 29,965 transactions and 27,173 processes issued. Nearly half (12,546) of these processes were issued after probable cause hearings. These hearings had an issuance rate of 97.2 percent. Bond hearings had an issuance rate of 83.8 percent, and resulted in 12,536 of the issued processes.

Eighteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Eighteenth Judicial Circuit serves the city of Alexandria. According to the 1980 Census, there were 103,217 residents in the area. Of this population, 18,938 were juveniles. While the total population is expected to increase 6.3 percent to 109,700 by 1990, the juvenile population is expected to decline 9.4 percent, to 17,157.

The Eighteenth Circuit Court is served by Donald Hall Kent, Donald M. Haddock, and Alfred D. Swersky. Judges Robert T.S. Colby and D.F. O'Flaherty presided in the general district court. Judge Stephen W. Rideout served in the juvenile and domestic relations district court. The judges of the district court used 146.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average usage of 48.87 days per judge.

There was a 7.5 percent increase in cases commenced in circuit court between 1988 (3,825 cases commenced) and 1989 (4,112 cases commenced). Commenced cases were split 59 percent civil (2,433 cases) and 41 percent criminal (1,679 cases). Civil cases increased 12.4 percent over 1988, while criminal cases increased only 1.1 percent. The distribution of commenced cases was: 32 percent law, 27 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 11 percent misdemeanor. Law and felony cases made up a greater proportion of the total cases in the Eighteenth than in the state as a whole. The state case distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload was 1,371 cases per judge, lower than the state average of 1,489 and the urban average of 1,515. The average civil caseload was 811, which ranked ninth in the state and was higher than both the state and urban averages (749 cases and 801 cases per judge, respectively). The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-eighth in the state, and, at 560 cases per judge, was lower than both the state and urban averages (740 and 715, respectively). The number of concluded cases increased 0.2 percent (ten cases), from 4,695 in 1988 to 4,705 in 1989. Of the cases concluded, 3,041 were civil cases. Of these, 7.4 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 1.4 percent by jury trial. Slightly more than half (56.2 percent) of concluded civil cases were ended within 12 months of filing. Of the 1,664 criminal cases concluded in 1989, 19.7 percent were ended by judge trial, 6.6 by jury. The proportion of criminal cases concluded within five months was 94.9 percent. One hundred twenty-one juries were impaneled in 1989. This represents a 28.7 percent increase over 1988.

In the general district court, 46,347 new cases were filed, 2.4 percent more than in 1988. The cases were distributed as follows: 17 percent criminal, 49 percent traffic, and 34 percent civil. This compares to a state distribution of 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. There were 51,073 hearings in the Eighteenth in 1989, down 0.4 percent from 1988. The average criminal caseload of 3,866 ranked twentieth in the state, and was lower than both the state average of 4,258 and the urban average of 4,436. The average civil caseload ranked fifteenth in the state, at 7,859, compared to 8,250 (state average) and 10,217 (urban average). The average traffic caseload of 11,450 ranked nineteenth in the state and was lower than the state (13,484) and urban (14,926) average caseloads.

In the juvenile and domestic relations court, there were 4,510 new cases in 1989. This represents a 2.1 percent increase over 1988. Juvenile cases made up about half of these new cases with 2,283. The remaining 2,227 new cases were domestic relations cases. The Eighteenth ranked eleventh in the state in total juvenile and domestic relations average caseload per judge, at 4,510 cases for Judge Rideout, compared to a statewide average caseload of 4,044 cases, and an urban average caseload of 4,341 cases per judge. The judge's juvenile caseload was 2,283, while his domestic relations caseload was 2,227 cases per judge. These compare with state average caseloads of 2,435 and 1,609, respectively, and urban average caseloads of 2,731 and 1,583 cases per judge.

There were 9,065 activity hours recorded by the seven magistrates of the Eighteenth. These magistrates issued 21,754 processes: 15,333 after probable cause hearings, 6,068 for bonds, 25 for civil warrants, and 328 for other processes. Of the probable cause hearings held, 94.5 percent resulted in a process issued. Among bond hearings, the issuance rate was 55.4 percent.

Nineteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Nineteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Fairfax County and the city of Fairfax. Until January 1, 1988, the Nineteenth Circuit also served the city of Falls Church. The 1980 Census recorded 625,806 residents in this area, including 182,215 juveniles. The Office of Planning and Budget projects that, while the total population will increase by 22.7 percent to 768,000 in 1990, the juvenile population will increase only 0.2 percent, to 182,582.

There are 13 authorized judgeships in the Nineteenth Circuit. These judgeships were served in 1989 by: F. Bruce Bach, Lewis H. Griffith, Richard J. Jamborsky, Thomas J. Middleton, Jr., Jack B. Stevens, J. Howe Brown, Jr., William G. Plummer, Johanna L. Fitzpatrick, Quinlan H. Hancock, Thomas A. Fortkort, Michael P. McWeeny, and Rosemarie P. Annunziata and Thomas S. Kenny who joined the circuit bench July 1, 1989. Serving the general district bench in 1989 were: Richard T. Horan, Robert M. Hurst, Stewart P. Davis, Frank B. Perry, III, Thomas J. Rothrock, J. Conrad Waters, Jr., Marcus D. Williams, Barbara L. Kimble, and Donald C. McDonough. The new judgeship, authorized by the 1990 General Assembly, will be filled by Ian M. O'Flaherty on July 1, 1990. Jane Pritchard Delbridge, Arnold B. Kassabian, Michael J. Valentine, Gaylord L. Finch, Jr., and James W. Fourqurean served the juvenile and domestic relations bench in 1989. The judges on the Nineteenth district used 402 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 28.73, was slightly higher than the state average of 25.18 days.

The 19,232 commenced cases in the circuit court reflected an 8.7 percent increase over 1988. Concluded cases increased 3.3 percent to 18,495. Civil cases accounted for 12,390 of the new cases, criminal cases made up the remaining, 6,842. These cases increased 8.2 and 9.6 percent, respectively. The caseload distribution was 31 percent law, 33 percent equity, 19 percent felony, and 17 percent misdemeanor. Civil cases made up a greater proportion, and criminal cases a lessor, of the caseload, when compared to the statewide distribution: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The Nineteenth ranked sixteenth in the state in average cases per judge, with a circuit average of 1,479. The statewide average was 1,489 cases per judge. The urban average was 1,515. The civil caseload average of 953 cases per judge was above the state average of 749 and the urban average of 801 civil cases per judge, and ranked third in the state. The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-ninth in the state, at 526 cases per judge, compared to a statewide average of 740, and an urban average of 715 cases per judge. Nine and a half percent of the 11,948 concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, while 1.3 percent ended in a jury trial. Fifty-seven percent of concluded civil cases ended within 12 months, below the state average of 62.4 percent. Of the 6,547 criminal cases concluded in 1989, 37.9 percent were terminated by judge trial, 5.4 percent by jury. The percentage of criminal cases ending within five months (83.8 percent) was higher than the state average of 76.9 percent. Four hundred eighty juries were impaneled, a decline of 4.8 percent from 1988.

New cases in the general district court increased 4.5 percent from 1988, to 301,588. The distribution of these cases was 9 percent criminal, 75 percent traffic, and 16 percent civil. The distribution of cases was significantly different from the state distribution of 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic and 32 percent civil. There were 277,728 hearings held in 1989, a 9.3 percent increase from 1988. The average criminal caseload was 3,071, which ranked twenty-seventh in the state and was 1,187 cases below the state average. The traffic caseload was 25,197, highest in the state and nearly twice the state average of 13,484, and the urban average of 14,926 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Nineteenth district was 5,242 cases per judge, more than 2,000 cases lower than the state average of 8,250, and ranking twenty-fifth in the state.

There were 22,610 new cases recorded in the juvenile and domestic relations court. Seventy-eight percent of these were juvenile cases, 22 percent were domestic relations cases. These new cases represented a 21.3 percent increase in total new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court, a 9.3 percent decrease in new juvenile cases, and a 0.2 percent decrease in domestic relations cases, from 1988. The juvenile caseload of 3,547 was above the state and urban averages of 2,435, and 2,731 cases per judge, respectively. The average juvenile caseload in the Nineteenth ranked third statewide. The domestic caseload ranked thirtieth in the state, and at 975, was below both the state average caseload of 1,609 and the urban average of 1,583 cases per judge.

The magistrates of the Nineteenth recorded 44,978 activity hours and issued 76,499 processes. More than half of these processes, 39,141, were issued after probable cause hearings; 31,199 were issued for bonds; one for a civil warrant; and 6,158 for other processes. There was a 93.9 percent issuance rate after probable cause hearings, a 53.7 percent issuance rate after bond hearings. These state issuance rates were 86.9 and 60.8 percent, respectively.

Twentieth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twentieth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Rappahannock. According to the 1980 Census, there were 99,409 residents in this area, of which 31,228 were juveniles. The number of residents is expected to increase by 25.2 percent for a total population of 124,500 by 1990. The juvenile population is predicted to increase by 11.7 percent to 34,881.

Thomas D. Horne, James H. Chamblin, and William S. Robertson served the Twentieth Circuit in 1989. Archibald M. Aiken, Jr., and Charles B. Foley served the general district court in 1989. J. Allen Walker joined the general district bench on April 1, 1989, filling the new judgeship created by the General Assembly. The juvenile and domestic relations court was served by A. Burke Hertz and Jean Harrison Clements. The judges of the Twentieth District used 92 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average usage of 18.4 days per judge. Across the state, the average usage was 25.18 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases in the Twentieth circuit rose 18.7 percent, to 4,221 commenced cases in 1989, versus 3,555 commenced cases in 1988. The number of civil cases in the circuit rose almost 10 percent, to 2,241, while the number of criminal cases rose more than 30 percent, to 1,980 cases. The number of pending cases in the circuit rose 9.3 percent, to 3,979 pending cases. The number of concluded cases rose nearly 15 (14.8) percent, to 3,882 cases concluded. The average circuit caseload in the Twentieth ranked twenty-first in the state, at 1,407 cases. The average criminal caseload in the Twentieth was twenty-third in the state, at 660 cases per judge, and the average civil caseload was thirteenth in the state, at 747 civil cases per judge. Statewide, the average circuit caseload was 1,489 cases per judge: 740 criminal cases per judge and 749 civil cases per judge. Over 1,800 cases (1,863) were concluded in the Twentieth: 7.5 percent by judge trial, 1 percent by jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases ended in a judge trial, 1.6 percent in a jury trial. In the Twentieth Circuit, 71.1 percent of concluded civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within that time. Among the 2,019 criminal cases that were concluded, 16.2 percent terminated in a judge trial, 5.8 percent in a trial with jury. Statewide, 25.8 percent of criminal cases terminated in a judge trial, 4.6 percent ended in a jury trial. In the Twentieth, 45.2 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. The number of juries impaneled in the Twentieth circuit in 1989 dropped 20.6 percent, from 102 juries in 1988, to 81 juries impaneled in 1989.

In general district court, 60,451 new cases were filed. This represents a 10.1 percent increase over 1988. The largest increase was experienced in criminal cases, which rose 17.2 percent, to 5,876 new criminal cases filed. Traffic cases rose 9 percent, to 42,542 new traffic cases filed, and civil cases rose to 12,033 filed: a 10.7 percent increase over 1988. The average civil caseload ranked twenty-seventh in the state. At 4,011 civil cases per judge, it was less than half the average civil caseload statewide (8,250 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload of 1,959 cases per judge was the lowest in the state, well below the average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload ranked fifteenth in the state, and, at 14,181 cases per judge, was higher than the state average criminal caseload of 13,484 cases per judge. The total average caseload of all general district cases was 20,150 cases per judge in the Twentieth District. This average caseload ranked twenty-fifth in the state. The average general district caseload statewide was 25,992 cases per judge; among rural districts, 21,750 cases per judge. The number of hearings held in the Twentieth District increased 8.4 percent, to 49,044 hearings.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court increased 5.6 percent, to 5,784 new cases filed. Juvenile cases made up 76 percent of the caseload, but increased only 1.6 percent, to 4,391 juvenile cases in 1989. Domestic relations cases, only 24 percent of the caseload, jumped more than 20 percent, from 1,159 in 1988 to 1,393 in 1989. Despite this large increase, the average domestic relations caseload per judge ranked thirty-first out of 32 districts, at 697 domestic relations cases per judge. The Twentieth's average juvenile caseload ranked eighteenth, at 2,196 cases per judge. The total average general district caseload in the Twentieth was 2,892 cases per judge, twenty-ninth in the state. The statewide average caseload was 2,435 juvenile cases per judge, 1,609 domestic relations cases per judge, and 2,892 total general district cases per judge.

There were 11 magistrates serving the Twentieth District in 1989. These magistrates recorded 10,926 activity hours, completed 15,224 transactions, and issued 11,035 processes. Probable cause hearings, with an 81.9 percent issuance rate, resulted in 7,469 processes issued. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 57.9 percent, resulting in 3,416 processes issued. Statewide, issuance rates were 86.9 percent in probable cause hearings, 60.8 percent in bond hearings. Civil warrants comprised two of the processes issued.

Twenty-first Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Henry and Patrick and the city of Martinsville are served by the Twenty-first Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 93,450 residents of 26,573 were juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase by 2.5 percent while the juvenile population is projected to decline by 14 percent down to 22,848.

Frank I. Richardson, Jr. and Kenneth M. Covington served the Twenty-first Circuit Court in 1989. Judge Covington retired January 1, 1990 and was replaced by David V. Williams. The general district court was served by J. Frank Greenwalt, Jr. and Charles M. Stone, and Junius P. Warren presided in juvenile and domestic relations court. The judges of the Twenty-first District used 49 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 16 days per judge was well below the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

There were 3,255 cases commenced in the Twenty-first Circuit in 1989. This represents a 15.1 percent increase over 1988, when 2,828 cases were commenced. The number of concluded cases in the circuit rose 9 percent, from 2,972 in 1988 to 3,238 in 1989. Among commenced cases, 1,223 were civil cases, a 7.8 percent rise over 1988. The number of commenced criminal cases rose 20 percent, to 2,032 cases. Misdemeanor cases made up a significantly larger share of the caseload than statewide averages, and law cases made up a lessor share. Statewide, the distribution of circuit cases was: 25 percent law, 25 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. In the Twenty-first, the distribution was: 17 percent law, 20 percent equity, 35 percent felony, and 27 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload in the Twenty-first was 1,628 cases per judge: 612 civil cases per judge, and 1,016 criminal cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-first ranked twenty-fifth in the state, and the average criminal caseload in the Twenty-first was the third highest in the state. The average caseload ranked tenth. The statewide average caseloads were 1,489 circuit cases, 749 civil cases, and 740 criminal cases per judge. Six percent of the 1,196 concluded cases were concluded by a judge trial. Less than 2 (1.8) percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded in a judge trial, 1.6 percent in jury trials. Almost 72 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Across the state, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within one year. Among the 2,042 criminal cases that were concluded in the Twenty-first last year, 14.2 percent terminated in judge trials, 11.8 percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 21.4 percent of criminal cases ended in judge trials, 3.4 percent in jury trials. Eighty-one percent of the concluded criminal cases were ended within five months of filing. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Eighty juries were impaneled in 1989, six less than in 1988.

In general district court, 31,860 new cases were filed, a 2.6 percent increase over 1988. The increase was experienced in civil and criminal cases only: traffic cases in the Twenty-first fell by 18.9 percent, from 11,184 in 1988, to 9,071 in 1989. Civil cases, which comprised more than half of the caseload, rose 16.1 percent, from 14,762 in 1988 to 17,133 in 1989. Criminal cases, 18 percent of the caseload, rose 11.1 percent, to 5,656 new cases in 1989. The general district caseload in the Twenty-first was 15,930 cases per judge. This caseload ranked twenty-ninth in the state, and was much lower than the statewide average caseload of 25,992 cases per judge, and also lower than the average caseload per judge among rural districts: 21,750 cases per judge. The Twenty-first had the lowest traffic caseload per judge in the state, at 4,536 traffic cases per judge. The average criminal caseload per judge ranked thirtieth, at 2,828 criminal cases per judge. The average civil caseload, however, was the eleventh highest in the state, at 8,567 civil cases per judge. The statewide average civil caseload per judge was 8,250 civil cases per judge. Hearings in the Twenty-first were up 5.3 percent, to 30,222 in 1989.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, the number of new cases rose 7.8 percent. The 2,711 new juvenile cases filed in the district represented a 5.2 percent decline in juvenile cases, while the 3,156 new domestic relations cases represented a 22.3 percent increase. The total of 5,870 new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court resulted in an average caseload of 5,870 cases for Judge Warren. This average caseload was the second highest in the state. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload per judge in Virginia was 4,044. In rural districts, the average juvenile and domestic relations caseload per judge was 3,782 cases per judge. Judge Warren's juvenile caseload of 2,711 cases per judge ranked ninth in the state, above the state average juvenile caseload of 2,435 cases per judge. The domestic relations caseload of 3,159 domestic relations cases ranked second in the state. Forty-six percent of the cases in juvenile and domestic relations court were juvenile cases; 54 percent were domestic relations cases.

The eight magistrates of the Twenty-first District recorded 11,007 activity hours, 19,770 transactions, and 16,933 processes issued. Most of the processes issued (6,811) were issued after probable cause hearings; 3,922 were issued after bond hearings, 3,506 civil warrants were issued, and 2,694 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings in the Twenty-first had a 9.1 percent issuance rate, above the statewide issuance rate of 86.9 percent. Bond hearings in the Twenty-first had a 64.9 percent issuance rate, compared to 60.8 percent statewide.

Twenty-second Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-second Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Pittsylvania and Franklin and the city of Danville. The 1980 Census reported a population of 147,529 residents, including 40,000 juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 4 percent, while the juvenile population is projected to decline by 8.1 percent to 36,746.

Beverly A. Davis, III, Samuel M. Hairston, and James F. Ingram served the Twenty-second Circuit Court in 1989. T. Ryland Dodson and William N. Alexander, II served the general district court. Coleman B. Yeatts, Jr. and Spiros B. Skenderis served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. Calvin W. Fowler was elected to fill the judgeship left vacant as a result of the death of Judge Skenderis in June, 1989. The judges of the Twenty-second District used 70 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 17 days per judge. Statewide, substitutes were used an average of 25.18 days per judge.

There was a 12.5 percent increase in the number of commenced cases in the Twenty-second Circuit in 1989. The circuit reported 5,409 cases commenced in 1989. The number of civil cases rose 5.2 percent, to 2,081 cases. The number of criminal cases in the circuit increased 17.6 percent, to 3,328 cases. The average circuit caseload in the Twenty-second was 1,803 cases per judge, and was the highest in the state. The statewide average circuit caseload ws 1,489 cases per judge. The average circuit caseload among rural circuits was 1,452 cases per judge. The circuit caseload in the Twenty-second was 23 percent equity, 16 percent law, 40 percent felony, and 21 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-second was 694 cases per judge, which ranked eighteenth in the state, and compares to the state average civil caseload of 749 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked second in the state, at 1,109 cases per judge, more than four times higher than the state average criminal caseload of 740 cases per judge. Just over 5,000 cases were concluded in 1989. Nearly 24 percent of the 1,995 concluded civil cases were concluded in a judge trial, 2.2 percent concluded in a jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury. Three and one-half percent of the 3,123 concluded criminal cases were terminated in a jury trial. Statewide, 4.6 percent of criminal cases were concluded by jury, 25.8 percent of criminal cases were concluded in a judge trial. In the Twenty-second, 36.4 percent of concluded criminal cases were ended in a judge trial. More than 84 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, while 86.6 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases and 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within their respective time periods. The number of juries impaneled nearly doubled (+91.9 percent): it rose from 62 in 1988 to 119 in 1989.

New cases filed in general district court rose 1 percent in 1989, to 51,405. One-third of these cases were civil cases, 45 percent were traffic cases, and 21 percent were criminal cases. Criminal cases and traffic cases each dropped, criminal cases by 1.6 percent to 11,014 cases, and traffic cases by 3.3 percent, to 22,966 cases. Civil cases rose 9.2 percent, to 17,425 cases. The resulting average criminal caseload of 5,507 cases per judge ranked fifth in the state, and was greater than the state average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge. The average district traffic caseload of 11,843 cases per judge ranked eighteenth in the state, and was below the state average traffic caseload of 13,484 cases per judge and the average traffic caseload among rural districts, 11,780 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 8,713 cases per judge ranked tenth in the state. It was nearly 500 cases above the state average civil caseload, and nearly 3,000 cases above the average civil caseload among rural districts. The number of hearings increased 7.1 percent, to 53,325 hearings.

A 15.5 percent increase in new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court was split between the 17.2 percent increase in juvenile cases and the 13.7 percent increase in domestic relations cases. The 4,968 new juvenile cases comprised 53 percent of the docket, and resulted in an average juvenile caseload of 2,484 cases per judge. New domestic relations cases, totaling 4,390, made up the remaining 47 percent of the docket. The average domestic relations caseload was 2,195 cases per judge, and ranked sixth in the state. ## Twenty-third Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-third judicial circuit includes the city of Roanoke, the county of Roanoke, and the city of Salem. According to the 1980 Census, the population was 197,123 including 49,895 juveniles. The number of juveniles in the area is projected to decrease to 46,904 by 1990, while the total population is expected to rise by 4.5 percent, to 205,904.

Clifford R. Weckstein, Kenneth E. Trabue, Roy B. Willett, Jack B. Coulter, G.O. Clemens, and Diane McQ. Strickland served the Twenty-third Circuit in 1989. Judge Coulter retired March 1, 1989. Judge Strickland joined the bench at that time after having served since 1987 on the general district court. Presiding in the general district court were George W. Harris, Julian H. Raney, Jr., Edward S. Kidd, Jr., John L. Apostolou, and Richard C. Pattisall. Frederick L. Hoback, Jr., Philip Trompeter and Joseph M. Clarke, II served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Substitute and retired, recalled judges were used for a total of 259.6 days in 1989: an average of 32.45 days per judge. Statewide, the average usage of substitute and retired, recalled judges was 25.18 days per judge.

There was a 12.3 percent increase in the number of commenced cses in 1989. In 1988, 7,484 cases were commenced; in 1989, 3,905 commenced civil cases and 4,498 commenced criminal cases brought the total number of commenced cases to 8,403. The number of civil cases rose 2.2 percent, while the number of criminal cases rose 22.8 percent. The caseload distribution was: 21 percent law, 26 percent equity, 39 percent felony, and 15 percent misdemeanor. The proportions of law and felony cases differed from the statewide distributions of 24 percent and 34 percent, respectively. The average caseload per judge (1,681) ranked fifth among the 31 circuits in the state, and was higher than both the statewide average of 1,489 cases per judge, and the urban average of 1,515 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 781 cases per judge ranked eleventh in the state while the average criminal caseload of 900 cases per judge ranked seventh. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 749 cases per judge, and the average criminal caseload was 740 cases per judge. The average urban civil caseload was 801 cases per judge, twenty more than the Twenty-third Circuit average civil caseload. About 8,000 cases were concluded in the Twenty-third Circuit, a 4.1 percent increase over 1988. Of the 3,785 civil cases concluded, 33.6 percent were terminated by a judge trial, while 1 percent were concluded by jury. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, and 1.6 percent were concluded by a jury trial. More than 64 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. This was slightly higher than the state total of 62.4 percent. Of the 4,251 criminal cases that were concluded in the Twenty-third Circuit, almost half (49.3 percent) were concluded by a judge trial, and 3.6 percent were terminated by a jury trial. Nearly 85 percent ended within five months. Statewide, 25.8 percent of criminal cases were concluded by a judge trial, 4.6 percent by jury trial, and 76.9 percent of concluded criminal cases reached termination within five months of filing. The number of juries impaneled rose 2.7 percent, from 112 in 1988 to 115 in 1989.

In the general district court, 112,603 new cases were filed. This represents a 4.8 percent increase over 188, when 107,461 new cases were filed. ## Twenty-fourth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-fourth Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson and the cities of Bedford and Lynchburg. The 1980 Census reported a population in this area of 194,411 residents, including 52,538 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase by 10.5 percent to 214,800, while the juvenile population is expected to decrease to 51,825.

The Twenty-fourth Circuit was served in 1989 by J. Samuel Johnston, Jr., Robert C. Goad, William W. Sweeney, Richard S. Miller and Mosby G. Perrow, III, who was elected to fill a new judgeship established for the circuit. The general district courts of the Twenty-fourth were served by James S. Farmer, Jesse C. Crumbley, III, Coy M. Kiser, Jr., and Paul Whitehead, Jr. Presiding the juvenile and domestic relations bench were Judges Lawrence Janow, W. Raymond Minnix, and Dale H. Harris. District judges used substitute and retired, recalled judges for 208.2 days. This averages to 29.74 days per judge, slightly higher than the state average.

Commenced were 6,150 cases in 1989, a 0.9 percent rise over 1988. Civil cases experienced an increase of 3 percent, from 2,964 in 1988 to 3,054 in 1989. Criminal cases fell 1.1 percent, from 3,131 in 1988 to 3,096 cases in 1989. More than a quarter of the commenced cases were equity cases, 21 percent were law cases, 34 percent were felony cases, and 16 percent were misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload of 1,230 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh in the state. The state average caseload was 1,489 cases per judge, and the average caseload among rural districts was 1,452 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-seventh in the state, and, at 619 cases per judge, fell below the average rural criminal caseload. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-fourth ranked twenty-sixth in the state, and at 611 cases per judge, was below both the average rural civil caseload of 676 cases per judge and the state average civil caseload of 749 cases per judge. More than 5,800 cases were concluded in 1989, a 3 percent increase over 1988. Of the 2,726 civil cases that were concluded in the Twenty-fourth district, 15 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 1.4 percent by jury. Statewide, 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases were terminated by a judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury trial. Nearly 2.5 percent of the 3,101 criminal cases concluded ended in jury trials; 44.9 percent ended in judge trials. Statewide, the figures were 4.6 and 25.8 percent, respectively. Nearly 80 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62.4 percent statewide. About 80 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months, compared to 76.9 percent statewide. The number of juries impaneled in 1989 dropped 42.9 percent, from 170 in 1988, to 97 juries in 1989.

In general district court, 73,113 new cases were filed in 1989. This represents an 11.3 percent increase over 1988. The greatest increase appeared among civil cases, which took up 31 percent of the docket and increase 17.7 percent to 22,766 cases in 1989. Nearly half (49 percent) of the district docket was traffic cases, which increased 5.9 percent, to 35,606 cases. Criminal cases made up the remaining 20 percent of the caseload. The number of criminal cases increased 15.9 percent, to 14,741 cases. The average caseload in general district court was the twenty-fourth highest in the state, at 20,309 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked seventeenth in the state, at 4,095 cases per judge. The statewide average criminal caseload was 4,258 cases per judge. The average civil and traffic caseloads in the Twenty-fourth ranked eighteenth and twenty-fifth, respectively. At 6,324 civil cases per judge and 9,891 traffic cases per judge, they were below the statewide average caseloads of 8,250 cases per judge and 13,484 cases per judge, respectively. Just under 81,000 hearings were held in the Twenty-fourth in 1989, a 17.4 percent increase over 1988.

There was a 6 percent increase in the number of new juvenile and domestic relations cases filed. Juvenile cases totaling 6,398 and domestic relations cases totaling 5,528 combined for a total new caseload in the Twenty-fourth of 11,926, and an average caseload that ranked seventeenth in the state. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 3,975 cases per judge, almost 200 cases higher than the rural district average of 3,782 cases per judge. The split juvenile average caseload (2,133 cases per judge) and domestic relations average caseload (1,843 cases per judge) ranked twentieth and thirteenth, respectively. The average juvenile caseload fell just below the average juvenile caseload among rural districts (2,149 cases per judge), and the average domestic relations caseload surpassed the state averages of 1,609 domestic relations cases per judge. Fifty-four percent of the docket were juvenile cases; 46 percent were domestic relations cases.

The 17 magistrates of the Twenty-fourth recorded 27,370 activity hours, 33,844 transactions, and 24,786 processes issued. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 78.6 percent, resulted in 1,086 processes issued. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 59.8 percent. Bond hearings resulted in 7,225 processes issued. Four civil warrants were issued; 2,471 other processes were issued.

Twenty-fifth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-fifth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland and Rockbridge and the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, Staunton, and Waynesboro. The 1980 Census recorded a population of 187,295 residents in this region, of which 49,309 were juveniles. While the total population is projected to increase by 4.1 percent by 1990, the juvenile population is expected to decline by 8.3 percent during the same period.

The Twenty-fifth Circuit Court was served in 1989 by Rudolph Bumgardner, III, Thomas H. Wood, Duncan M. Byrd, Jr., and George E. Honts, III. Presiding the general district bench were: Joseph E. Hess, William E. Carson, Sr., Talmage N. Cooley, and Louis K. Campbell. Robert S. Culpepper, John B. Curry, III, and Harrison May served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The judges of the Twenty-fifth District used 154.2 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 22.03 days per judge. Statewide, an average of 25.18 days per judge were used for substitutes.

The number of cases commenced in the Twenty-fifth Circuit rose 4.9 percent in 1989, to 5,262 cases. The number of commenced criminal cases rose sharply, 7.9 percent, to 2,732. Civil cases rose, increasing 1.8 percent in 1989. Felony cases took up a large share of the docket, comprising 37 percent of commenced cases. Statewide, felony cases were 34 percent of cases commenced in 1989. Law cases comprised 18 percent of the Twenty-fifth's caseload, equity cases were 30 percent, and misdemeanor cases accounted for the remaining 15 percent. Statewide, these caseload shares were: 24 percent, 27 percent, and 16 percent, respectively. The average criminal caseload in the Twenty-fifth Circuit ranked twentieth in the state, at 683 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload in the state was 740 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-fifth was 683 cases per judge. The civil caseload ranked twenty-second in the state, and was below the state average civil caseload of 749 cases per judge, and above the average civil caseload among rural circuits: 676 cases per judge. The combined average caseload of 1,316 cases per judge ranked twenty-fifth in the state and fell below the rural average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge and the state average caseload of 1,489 cases per judge. Just over 5,000 cases were concluded in 1989, about the same number as in 1988. Of the 2,456 civil cases that were concluded, 13.6 percent were terminated in a trial by judge, 1.4 percent were concluded by jury trial. More than 67 percent were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury trial, and 62.4 percent within 12 months of filing. Almost 5 percent of the 2,597 criminal cases concluded in the Twenty-fifth were concluded by jury trial; 40.6 percent were concluded by judge trial. Statewide, 4.6 percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, 25.8 percent ended by judge trials. Over 78 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing, above the state total of 76.9 percent concluded in that time. Ninety-three juries were impaneled in 1989, a 2.2 percent increase from 1988.

In general district court, 75,614 new cases were filed in 1989. This represents a 6.1 percent decline from the number filed in 1988. The numbers of criminal and civil cases rose 1.7 and 5.9 percent, respectively, but were offset by an 11.3 percent drop in the number of traffic cases, which comprised 62 percent of the total caseload. Criminal cases, of which there were 13,959, comprised 18 percent of the caseload. Civil cases (14,980 cases filed) made up the remaining 20 percent. The number of hearings in the Twenty-fifth District fell 0.3 percent, to 79,430. The average general district caseload of 17,185 cases per judge ranked twenty-eighth among the 32 districts. The average traffic caseload (10,608 cases per judge) ranked twenty-third and the average civil caseload (3,405 cases per judge) ranked thirtieth. The average traffic caseload fell below the average state and average rural traffic caseload of 11,780 cases per judge, as did the average civil caseload and the average criminal caseload. At 3,173 cases per judge, the Twenty-fifth's average criminal caseload was twenty-sixth in the state.

The number of new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose 6.4 percent, to 10,114 cases. Most of this increase came among domestic relations cases, which comprised 40 percent of the caseload, and at 4,056 new cases filed in 1989, registered a 15.9 percent increase over 1988. Juvenile cases rose only 0.8 percent, to 6,058. The juvenile and domestic relations average caseload both ranked among the bottom third in the state. ## Twenty-sixth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, and Warren and the cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester comprise the Twenty-sixth Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 209,201 in the area, including 54,937 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase 13.2 percent, to 236,900. The juvenile population is projected to increase 0.8 percent, to 55,375.

Porter R. Graves, Jr., Joshua L. Robinson, Robert K. Woltz, and Perry W. Sarver served the Twenty-sixth Circuit Court in 1989. Judge Woltz retired July 1, 1989 and was replaced by James L. Berry. John F. Ewell, John A. Paul, Norman DeV. Morrison, and David G. Simpson served on the general district bench. The juvenile and domestic relations courts were served by B.B. Bowers and Carle F. Germelman, Jr. Judges in the district court used 98.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average of 16.43 days per judge, lower than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

Commenced cases in the Twenty-sixth Circuit rose 19 percent in 1989, to a total of 6,450 cases. However, the dramatic increase of 41.9 percent in criminal cases was completely responsible for the rise; the number of commenced civil cases fell 3 percent, to 2,682. The rise in the number of commenced criminal cases could be seen in the caseload distribution: felony cases made up nearly half of the caseload, followed by equity (27 percent), law (15 percent), and misdemeanor (9 percent). Statewide, the distribution was: 24 percent equity, 27 percent law, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload of 1,613 cases per judge ranked twelfth in the state, and surpassed the rural average circuit caseload of 1,452 cases per judge and the state average circuit caseload of 1,489 cases per judge. The average civil caseload (671 cases per judge) ranked twentieth in the state, and fell below the state and rural averages (749 cases per judge, and 676 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload of 942 cases per judge, however, ranked fifth in the state. The average criminal caseload was more than 200 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload. Of the 2,678 civil cases concluded last year in the Twenty-sixth, 10.5 percent were concluded by a judge trial, and 1.2 percent were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury trial. Twelve percent of the 3,269 concluded criminal cases were concluded by judge trial; 6.7 percent were concluded by jury. Statewide, the proportions were 25.8 and 4.6 percent, respectively. About 72 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62.4 percent statewide. Among criminal cases, 80.6 percent were concluded within five months, compared to 76.9 percent statewide. The number of juries impaneled fell 6 percent in 1989. One hundred fifty-seven juries were impaneled.

In the general district courts, 95,133 new cases were filed in 1989, a 6.5 percent increase over 1988. The greatest increase was recorded among criminal cases, which comprised 23 percent of new cases filed, and rose 12 percent to 21,429 cases. Traffic cases rose 2.3 percent, to 49,045 cases. Traffic cases made up 52 percent of the docket. Civil cases, which shared 26 percent of new cases in the Twenty-sixth, showed a 10.8 percent increase: to 24,659 cases in 1989. About 106,000 hearings were held in 1989, an 8.8 percent rise over 1988. The average criminal caseload of 5,357 cases per judge was seventh highest in the state and well above the state average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge and the rural average criminal caseload of 4,046 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload (12,261 cases per judge) and average civil caseload (6,165 cases per judge) ranked sixteenth and nineteenth, respectively. Both of these caseloads were lower than the state average caseloads of 13,484 traffic cases per judge and 8,250 cases per judge, but greater than the average caseloads among rural districts (11,780 traffic and 5,924 civil cases per judge). The total average general district caseload of 23,783 cases per judge ranked seventeenth in the state, and was about 2,000 cases lower than the state average caseload, but about 2,000 cases higher than the rural average caseload.

In juvenile and domestic relations courts, 9,778 new cases were filed. This represents a 4.8 percent increase over the 1988 total of 9,327 new cases filed. Two-thirds of these cases were juvenile cases. The number of juvenile cases filed rose 2.6 percent, to 6,516 new cases in 1989. The remaining third of the docket was domestic relations cases, which rose 9.6 percent over 1988, to 3,262 new cases. The average juvenile caseload of 3,258 cases per judge ranked fourth in the state, and was above the average state juvenile caseload of 2,435 cases per judge and the average rural juvenile caseload of 2,149 cases per judge. The total average caseload ranked seventh in the state and at 4,889 cases per judge, was above the state average caseload of 4,044 cases per judge, and the rural average caseload of 3,782 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,631 cases per judge ranked sixteenth in the state, between the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,609 cases per judge and the rural average domestic relations caseload of 1,633 cases per judge.

The 16 magistrates of the Twenty-sixth recorded 19,267 activity hours, during which they completed 34,600 transactions and issued 27,108 processes. Probable cause hearings resulted in 17,271 processes issued; 9,193 bonds were issued. Nine civil warrants were issued; 635 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings in the Twenty-sixth had an 86.8 percent issuance rate. Statewide, the issuance rate was 86.9 percent. Bond hearings statewide had an issuance rate of 60.8 percent. In the Twenty-sixth, bonds were issued after 66.1 percent of bond hearings.

Twenty-eighth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-eighth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Smyth and Washington and the city of Bristol. The population of this area, according to the 1980 Census, was 95,895 residents, including 26,953 juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to climb 13.6 percent to 103,400, while the juvenile population is expected to decline to 25,464.

Charles B. Flannagan, II and Charles H. Smith, Jr. served the Twenty-eighth Circuit in 1989. David D. Brown and T.L. Hutton, Jr. served the general district court, and Paul D. Greer and Eugene E. Lohman served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. Judges in the district court used 53.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average of 13.40 days per judge, lower than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases fell 2 percent in 1989, to 2,361. The decrease came among criminal cases, which fell 4.9 percent, to 933 cases commenced. The number of civil cases stayed constant, at 1,428 in 1988 and 1989. Equity cases represented a large share of commenced cases in 1989, making up 37 percent of the caseload. Statewide, equity cases accounted for only 27 percent of the circuit caseload. In the Twenty-eighth Circuit, the remaining commenced cases were divided between law cases (24 percent), felony cases (30 percent), and misdemeanor cases (10 percent). The average caseload in the Twenty-eighth of 1,181 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth among the 31 circuits. The average caseload fell below the state average caseload of 1,489 cases per-judge, and the average caseload among rural circuits: 1,452 cases per judge. The average civil and the average criminal caseloads ranked sixteenth and thirty-first, and were also lighter than the state average caseload, although the average civil caseload surpassed the average civil caseload among rural circuits. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-eighth was 714 cases per judge, compared to a statewide average of 749 cases per judge, and a rural average of 676 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 647 cases per judge; the statewide average was 740 cases per judge, the rural average, 776 cases per judge. The number of cases concluded in the Twenty-eighth Circuit rose 3.7 percent, to 2,247 cases. One thousand three hundred twenty (1,320) civil cases were concluded; about 16 percent by a judge trial, and 2 percent by a jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases were terminated by judge trial, and 1.6 percent by jury. Seventy-seven percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62.4 percent statewide. Of the 927 criminal cases that were concluded in the Twenty-eighth Circuit in 1989, 14.1 percent were concluded in a judge trial, 7 percent were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, these figures were 25.8 and 4.6 percent, respectively. More than 73 percent of concluded criminal cases ended within five months of filing. Statewide, 76.9 percent were concluded within that time. One hundred twenty-seven juries were impaneled in 1989, up 5 percent from 1988.

The general district court experienced a 4 percent decline in the number of new cases filed. The rise was divided across the docket: criminal cases, which made up 23 percent of the caseload, fell 2.5 percent, to 6,438; traffic cases (56 percent of the caseload) fell 6.6 percent, to 15,972; and civil cases, the remaining 21 percent of the caseload, rose 1.7 percent, to 6,030 cases. The total district caseload of 14,220 new cases filed was more than 10,000 cases below the average state caseload of 25,992 new cases. The average criminal, traffic and civil caseloads, at 3,219 criminal cases per judge, 7,986 traffic cases per judge and 3,015 civil cases per judge, ranked twenty-fifth, twenty-ninth and thirty-first, among 32 districts. All were below the average state caseloads, and the average caseloads among rural districts. The average rural caseloads were: 4,046 criminal cases, 11,780 traffic cases, and 5,924 civil cases per judge. The average caseloads statewide were: 4,258 criminal cases, 13,484 traffic cases, and 8,250 civil cases per judge. There were 26,343 hearings in the Twenty-eighth circuit in 1989, a 3.4 percent decline from 1988.

New cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court rose only 1.9 percent in 1989, to 5,598 cases. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was thirtieth in the state, at 2,799 cases per judge. The average caseload was well below the state average caseload of 4,044 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 3,782 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload in the Twenty-eighth district ranked twenty-seventh in the state. The 3,406 new juvenile cases filed showed a one case decrease over 1988, and resulted in an average juvenile caseload of 1,703 cases per judge. This compares to an average state juvenile caseload of 2,435 cases per judge, and an average rural juvenile caseload of 2,149 cases per judge. Juvenile cases made up 61 percent of all new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in the Twenty-eighth District in 1989. New domestic relations cases, which comprised the remaining 39 percent of the docket, rose 5.1 percent in 1989, to 2,192 cases. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,096 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth in the state, and was also well below the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,609 cases per judge, and the rural average domestic relations caseload of 1,633 cases per judge.

Eleven magistrates recorded 16,203 activity hours in the Twenty-eighth District in 1989, resulting in 22,698 transactions and 16,359 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 8,468 processes issued. Probable cause hearings had an issuance rate of 74.7 percent. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 62 percent, resulted in 4,586 processes issued. Twenty civil warrants were issued in 1989; 3,285 other processes were issued.

Twenty-ninth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-ninth Circuit serves the counties of Buchanan, Dickenson, Russell, and Tazewell. The 1980 Census reported a total of 140,067 residents in this area, including 44,569 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase by 7.9 percent to 151,000. The juvenile population is expected to increase to 46,761.

The Twenty-ninth Circuit Court was served in 1989 by Nicholas E. Persin, Donald A. McGlothlin, Jr., and Donald R. Mullins. Thomas J. Bondurant, Frederick H. Combs and Keary B. Williams served the general district bench. Thomas J. Bondurant will retire from the bench May 16, 1990. The vacancy was not certified by the Committee on District Courts. J. Wesley McClintock, III and Susan Bundy presided the juvenile and domestic relations bench. Judges of the Twenty-ninth used 71.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average of 14.28 days per judge was lower than the state average.

The total number of commenced cases in circuit court rose only slightly (0.2 percent) in 1989, to 3,207 cases. This slight total rise, however, was created by a 9.2 percent drop in the number of commenced civil cases (1,792 civil cases in 1989) and a 15.2 percent rise in commenced criminal cases (1,415 criminal cases in 1989). As proportions of the total circuit caseload, law and equity cases were 26 and 30 percent of the caseload, while felony and misdemeanor cases comprised 28 and 16 percent of the caseload, respectively. Statewide, the proportions were: 24 percent law, 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average total caseload for the Twenty-ninth district was 1,069 cases per judge. This was the lowest average caseload in the state. The state average caseload per judge was 1,489 cases; the average caseload among rural districts was 1,452 cases. The average criminal caseload ranked thirtieth in the state, at 472 criminal cases per judge. The state average was 740 criminal cases per judge, the rural average was 776 criminal cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 597 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh in the state. It was lower than the average civil caseload among rural districts: 676 cases per judge. The number of concluded cases rose 5.1 percent in 1989, to 3,355 cases. Among the 1,952 concluded civil cases, 10.7 percent terminated in a judge trial, while 1.5 percent terminated in a jury trial. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases concluded in judge trials, 1.6 percent in jury trials. Sixty percent of civil cases in the Twenty-ninth were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within a year. Almost 7 percent of the 1,403 concluded criminal cases were concluded by jury trial, while 9.1 percent were concluded in judge trials. Statewide, only 4.6 percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, while 25.8 percent concluded in judge trials. Over 68 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months, compared to 76.9 percent, statewide. The number of juries impaneled in 1989 dropped 38.1 percent, to 83.

A 15 percent increase in the number of new general district cases was reported in the Twenty-ninth. A total of 35,533 cases were filed in 1989; many of these were related to the 1989 "coal strike." The number of criminal cases nearly doubled, jumping 55.2 percent, to 10,731 cases. Traffic cases increased 4.6 percent, to 14,248 cases, and civil cases remained steady, increasing 1.8 percent, to 10,554 new cases. Criminal cases comprised 30 percent of the total caseload. Traffic cases comprised 40 percent of the total caseload, and the remaining 30 percent of the caseload was civil cases. The average caseload per judge was 11,844 cases: the lowest in the state. The average caseload statewide was 25,992 cases per judge, and the average caseload among rural districts was 21,750 cases per judge. The average criminal, traffic and civil caseloads all ranked in the bottom third, statewide, and were below state and rural average caseloads. The number of hearings in the Twenty-ninth increased 23.4 percent, to 42,007 hearings.

In the Twenty-ninth District, there was a 9.4 percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations cases: 6,712 cases. Juvenile cases, of which 3,885 were filed, comprised 58 percent of the caseload. Domestic relations cases, of which there were 2,827 filed, represented 42 percent of the caseload. The total number of juvenile cases rose 10.4 percent, resulting in an average juvenile caseload of 1,943 cases per judge, which ranked twenty-fifth in the state. The state average juvenile caseload was 2,435 cases per judge. The total number of domestic relations cases increased 7.9 percent, resulting in an average caseload of 1,414 domestic relations cases per judge. This average caseload ranked twenty-third in the state, below the rural average domestic relations caseload of 1,633 cases per judge. The total juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 3,356 cases per judge and ranked twenty-fourth statewide. The state average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 4,044 cases per judge.

The 15 magistrates of the Twenty-ninth recorded 19,255 activity hours, 31,118 transactions, and 22,059 processes issued. Thirty-six civil warrants were issued. 12,017 processes were issued after probable cause hearings, 8,089 were issued after bond hearings, and 1,917 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings statewide had an 86.9 percent issuance rate. Bond hearings had a 60.8 percent issuance rate, statewide. In the Twenty-ninth, these rates were 83.2 and 60.5 percent, respectively.

Thirtieth Judicial Circuit and District

The Thirtieth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Lee, Scott, and Wise and the city of Norton. The 1980 Census reported a total of 99,644 residents in this area, including 29,586 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase by 9.5 percent ot 109,100, and the juvenile population is expected to increase to 31,370.

William C. Fugate, John Robert Stump and James C. Roberson presided in the circuit court. Serving the Thirtieth general district court in 1989 were: R. Larry Lewis and Suzanne K. Fulton. Judges David B. Summerfield and Elizabeth S. Sturgill served in the juvenile and domestic relations court in 1989. Thirtieth District court judges used 73 days for retired, recalled and substitute judges. The district average of 18.25 days per judge was lower than the state average of 25.18 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases fell 1.7 percent in the Thirtieth Circuit, from 3,453 in 1988 to 3,396 in 1989. The number of commenced civil cases fell 2.8 percent, from 1,554 to 1,510 in 1989. The number of criminal cases commenced in the Thirtieth Circuit in 1989 fell slightly (0.7 percent), to 1,886. Sixteen percent of commenced cases in the Thirtieth were law cases, 28 percent were equity cases, 31 percent were felony cases, and 24 percent were misdemeanor. Statewide, the distributions were 24 percent law and 27 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average total circuit caseload of 1,132 cases per judge ranked thirtieth among the state circuits, as did the average civil caseload of 503 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 629 cases per judge in the Thirtieth Circuit ranked twenty-fifth in the state. The statewide average criminal caseload was 740 cases per judge; the rural average criminal caseload was 776 cases per judge. The Thirtieth's average civil caseload fell well below the rural average of 676 cases per judge and the state average of 749 cases per judge. The total average caseload in the Thirtieth was lower than the state average of 1,489 cases per judge. The number of cases concluded in the Thirtieth fell 16.4 percent, to 3,336 cases in 1989. Nearly 17 percent of the 1,512 civil cases that were concluded were terminated by a judge trial. Jury trials concluded 1.9 percent of civil cases. Statewide, 11.1 percent of civil cases were concluded by judge trial, 1.6 percent by jury trial. About 53 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Across the state, 62.4 percent of civil cases were concluded in that time frame. Fifteen percent of concluded criminal cases were ended by judge trial, compared to 25.8 percent statewide. Trials by juries concluded 8.5 percent of criminal cases in the Thirtieth circuit. Statewide, juries concluded 4.6 percent of criminal cases. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months; in the Thirtieth Circuit, 52.3 percent were concluded in five months. One hundred twenty-eight juries were impaneled in 1989, down 20 percent from 1988.

New cases filed in the general district courts rose 1.7 percent, to 30,354 in 1989. Twenty-five percent of these cases were criminal, 60 percent were traffic cases, and 15 percent were civil cases. Across the state, the distribution of new cases in the general district courts was 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. Criminal cases rose 3 percent, to 7,516 cases in the district. Traffic cases increased 6.3 percent in the district. The number of civil cases commenced in the Thirtieth dropped 14.4 percent. The number of hearings in the Thirtieth dropped 2.3 percent, to 40,570 in 1989. Generally, the caseloads of the Thirtieth district ranked in the bottom third of the caseloads across the state, and were lower than the state average caseloads, and average caseloads among rural districts. The total average caseload in the Thirtieth was 15,177 cases per judge; statewide, the average was 25,992 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 3,758 cases per judge was less than the state average criminal caseload of 4,258 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 2,334 cases per judge was less than the state civil average of 8,250, and the average traffic caseload in the Thirtieth District ranked twenty-ninth in the state, and, at 9,085 cases per judge, below the state average traffic caseload of 13,484 cases per judge.

In 1989, 5,986 new cases were filed in juvenile and domestic relations courts in the Thirtieth District. This represented a 3 percent increase over 1988. Most of this increase came among domestic relations cases, which made up 46 percent of the caseload, and increased 5.2 percent, to 2,750 cases in 1989. Juvenile cases rose only 1.2 percent, to 3,236 cases. While the total juvenile and domestic relations average caseload of 2,993 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh, and the juvenile caseload of 1,618 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth in the state, the average domestic relations caseload in the Thirtieth District ranked twenty-fourth in the state. ### Thirty-first Judicial Circuit and District

Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park are served by the Thirty-first Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded a population of 166,665 residents in this area, of which 60,948 were juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 32.4 percent to 220,700. The juvenile population is expected to increase 18 percent, to 70,855.

H. Selwyn Smith, Percy Thornton, Jr., Herman A. Whisenant, Jr., and Frank A. Hoss, Jr. served the Thirty-first Circuit Court in 1989. The newly established circuit judgeship will be filled July 1, 1990 by Judge William D. Hamblen, who has served in the general district court since 1986. William R. Murphy, Joseph A. Gallagher, and Richard B. Potter served the general district court. Leroy F. Millette, Jr. was elected to fill Judge Hamblen's position. Judge Murphy will retire October 1, 1990 and Wenda K. Travers was elected to fill the upcoming vacancy. Serving the juvenile and domestic relations court in 1989 were Raymond O. Kellam, Patrick D. Molinari, and William A. Becker. The Thirty-first district used 52.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The second lowest average in the state, 7.54 days per judge, was far below the state average.

Six thousand six hundred forty-two (6,642) cases were commenced in the Thirty-first Circuit Court during 1989. This represents a 3.1 percent increase over the number commenced in 1988. Concluded cases decreased 6.4 percent in 1989, to 5,537. Civil cases commenced increased 0.3 percent, to 3,590. Criminal cases increased 6.6 percent, from 2,863 in 1988 to 3,052 in 1989. Law cases accounted for 23 percent of cases in the Thirty-first Circuit; equity, 31 percent of cases; felony, 32 percent of cases; and misdemeanor, 14 percent. This distribution roughly parallels the state distribution. The judges in the Thirty-first Circuit averaged 1,661 cases each. This ranks the Thirty-first Circuit eighth in the state in the 1989 caseload per judge. The statewide average caseload was 1,489 per judge; the urban average caseload was 1,515 cases per judge. The Thirty-first Circuit ranked fifth in civil caseload, with an average of 898 cases per judge, and fourteenth in criminal caseload, with an average of 763 cases per judge. This compares with a state average caseload of 749 civil and 740 criminal cases per judge. Statewide, 11.1 percent of concluded civil cases ended by a judge trial, 1.6 percent by a trial by jury. Almost 26 percent of criminal cases concluded in the state were judge trials, 4.6 percent were jury trials. More than 62 percent of the civil cases commenced in the state were concluded within 12 months. Statewide, 76.9 percent of criminal cases commenced in 1989 were concluded within five months. In the Thirty-first Circuit, 10.5 percent of concluded civil cases were judge trials, 1.5 percent were jury trials. Nearly 17 (16.9) percent of criminal cases concluded in the Thirty-first Circuit were ended by judge trial, 4.9 percent by jury. In the Thirty-first Circuit, 75.9 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months; 66.1 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. One hundred fifteen juries were impaneled in the Thirty-first Circuit in 1989, a 14.2 percent decrease from 1988.

The number of new cases in the general district court was up 5.2 percent over 1988, to 97,923 cases. Criminal cases increased 5.2 percent, to 16,182; traffic cases increased 2.5 percent to 60,471, and civil cases increased 13.7 percent in 1989, to 21,270. The distribution of new cases in general district court was: 17 percent criminal, 61 percent traffic, and 22 percent civil. This is somewhat close to the statewide distribution of 16 percent criminal, 52 percent traffic, and 32 percent civil. Hearings increased 6.1 percent, from 88,124 in 1988 to 93,530 in 1989. The district ranked fifteenth in the state in terms of total caseload per judge in general district court, with 24,481 cases per judge. The criminal caseload of 4,046 cases per judge ranked eighteenth in the state, the average traffic caseload of 15,118 cases per judge ranked eleventh, and the average civil caseload of 5,318 ranked twenty-third. These caseloads compare with statewide averages of: 4,258 criminal, 13,484 traffic, and 8,250 civil.

There were 11,926 new cases filed in the juvenile and domestic relations court in the Thirty-first during 1989. This number represents a decrease of 3.1 percent from 1988. Juvenile cases, down 6.7 percent to 8,406, accounted for 71 percent of the cases in juvenile and domestic relations court. Domestic relations cases increased 6.5 percent to 3,520. This represented 29 percent of the caseload. The Thirty-first District ranked eighth in the state in the number of juvenile and domestic relations cases per judge. Judges in the Thirty-first's juvenile and domestic relations courts heard an average of 3,975 new cases. This is slightly lower than the state average of 4,044, and below the urban average of 4,314. In juvenile cases, the Thirty-first, with a per judge average of 2,802, was above both the statewide average of 2,435 and the urban average of 2,731. However, the domestic relations caseload of 1,173 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh statewide, and fell below both the state average, 1,609, and the urban average, 1,583 cases per judge.

Magistrates in the Thirty-first District recorded 19,717 activity hours and 52,568 transactions. These transactions resulted in 40,660 processes issued: 16,711 after probable cause hearings, 12,442 bonds, 664 civil warrants, and 10,843 other processes. Processes were issued in 94 percent of probable cause hearings, and 53.5 percent of bond hearings.
